The Sydney Morning Herald.

No. 24,967. Registered at the General Post Office, Sydney, for transmission by post as a newspaper. SYDNEY, SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1918. 22 PAGES. PRICE, 1d.

SUMMARY.

M. Marcel Hutin states that Weyrsch, who has been created a Field-Marshal, will command the German offensive on the West.

M. Hutin declares that the offensive will commence when the weather permits of it.

Despite Thursday night's thaw, the battlefields in the West, after another heavy blizzard, are still under a deep shroud of white.

The front is strangely quiet. The guns are mostly silent, owing to poor visibility through the whirling flakes of snow.

The London and Rifle regiments successfully raided three points of the enemy trenches south-east of Ypres.

Aeroplanes on Wednesday bombed the enemy's billets and hutments and machine-gunned troops in the trenches.

Mr. Baker says the United States Military Department has provided for an army of 110,856 officers and 1,428,655 men.

A substantial army is now in France. "More has been done," says Mr. Baker, "than anybody believes."

It is stated that no generals or other officers have been sent home in consequence of the German counter-attack at Cambrai.

The recent changes at general headquarters, it is remarked, have no connection with the reverse.

Artillery is in constant readiness in Berlin to meet a proletariat uprising.

There is great distress among the workers in Denmark. Factories are closed, owing to the lack of raw materials.

In connection with last week's shipping losses, it is pointed out that it is unfair to take two or three weeks' sinkings.

The curves showing the sinkings and the new output of tonnage are declared to be entirely in the Allies' favour.

During the past quarter only 1 per cent. of food carried by sea has actually been lost.

One French vessel over 1600 tons and none under that tonnage, was sunk during the week ended January 6.

The Italians, with renewed spirit, are reported to be taking the offensive, and have advanced a short distance.

The Amsterdam "Tijd" says that Germany's answer to all suggestions for a durable peace is the sinking of another hospital ship.

The German press unanimously condemns President Wilson's statement of America's war aims.

The "North German Gazette" says his 14 points are not a programme of a world peace, but a provocation of endless wars.

The Amsterdam "Hetvolk" says that President Wilson's terms are impossible for the Central Powers.

General Alexieff considers it is necessary to organise for a struggle against the Bolsheviks.

The Swiss journal "Der Bund" states that a separate peace has been signed between Russia and Bulgaria.

A conference of the British Workers' League has inaugurated a German Lost Colonies' Committee.

The committee opposes the handing back of any colonies to Germany.

A group of British textile merchants has discovered the German aniline dye secrets.

The House of Lords carried the proposal to grant women suffrage by 134 votes to 65.

The United States House of Representatives has passed a motion in favour of women suffrage.

The debate on the No-confidence motion was proceeded with in the House of Representatives yesterday.

Mr. Tudor called upon the Government to honour its pledge.

The Prime Minister emphasised the fact that co-operation in war work was necessary.

The Government was there constitutionally, and intended to carry out the policy on which it was elected.

The debate was adjourned until Tuesday next.

The South Australian branch of the Australian Labour party demands that the National party shall honour the Hughes pledge.

A return shows that 287,926 men had enlisted in the A.I.F. since the war, representing 7.884 of the population.

On the percentage basis Western Australia has the best record, with New South Wales and Queensland in that order.

A deputation waited upon Mr. Fitzpatrick in reference to the notices served on the Harbour Trust tenants at Miller's Point.

The Minister, in an outspoken reply, said much of the criticism against the Government was intended for political purposes.

The Newcastle Chamber of Commerce protests against forcing the Victorian Government to carry out the coal contract.

At a largely attended meeting yesterday a Primary Industries Development League was formed.

Mr. Fuller said that if the objects of the league were realised it would be a big factor in the development of the country.

Dr. Gilruth states that while mining in the Northern Territory is hopeful, it is not likely to solve the question of settlement.

The Newcastle Chamber of Commerce has carried a motion against the nationalisation of the coal mines.

The oversea imports at Newcastle for 1917 showed a decrease of £452,494 as compared with 1916.

The Rev. E. H. B. Claydon, rector of St. Luke's, Concord, and Burwood, has been elected a canon of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

Some heavy fines were inflicted yesterday for the illegal sale of liquor. In one case the fine was £100.

A licensed motor driver was committed for trial in connection with a motor car fatality in Oxford street.

The Acting City Coroner opened an inquiry into the death of a Russian named Ristkok, one of the victims of the Botany Bay disaster.

The bodies of Haberfield and Wilson, who were also drowned, have not yet been recovered.

The president of the Chamber of Manufactures will represent that body at the Repatriation Conference in Melbourne.

The Governor of Papua says that an organised trading company could export copra from Papua valued at £40,000 annually.

A miner was sent to gaol for six months at Broken Hill for taking part in the mine raids on August 22.

The fund towards the appeal for £20,000 on behalf of the Scottish Women's War Hospitals now amounts to £5663 8s 6d.

A motion is to be brought forward in the House of Representatives for a Royal Commission upon the Commonwealth Bank.

It is understood that the mover will urge the advisability of appointing a board of management.

The new Commonwealth light dues are viewed with much concern in Hobart.

The Marine Board fears they will cause the isolation of Tasmania in the matter of direct trade with England.

A resident of Sunnyside, near Strond, is reported to have died at the age of 102 years and 10 months.

At a special meeting of the A.M.P. Society amendments were made in the by-laws which were brought up-to-date.

A clerk was committed for trial yesterday on charges of embezzlement from a company.

Rain has fallen practically throughout the State. Over five inches fell in Parramatta in 11 hours, and over 4 inches in Sydney.

A wheat crop from 90 acres in the Albury district, grown for patriotic purposes, yielded £220.

A fair volume of business was transacted in investments on the Stock Exchange yesterday. Prices ruled generally firmer.

The feature of mining business was continued activity in Mammoth Molybdenite. Barriers moved quietly in an easier market.

Heavy supplies of eggs were on hand, but a keen demand ruled, and a steady trade was done.

Consignments totalling 675 bags of potatoes arrived from the Hunter River. The demand was keen, and prices rose to £7.

Forecast: Unsettled, with more general rain and thunderstorms, further heavy falls, more particularly in coastal and north-eastern districts.

IT SEEMS EASY ENOUGH TO RUN A SAFIX MILLER OUTBOARD MOTOR.
"Newcastle.
"I received the Safix Miller Motor safely, and after putting it together, gave it a run of six miles on Lake Macquarie. Next day I took a party of six in an 18ft boat for a run of 8 miles, and although we faced a stiff north-easter coming back, the motor worked beautifully without the least trouble. Seeing I had no previous experience with any class of oil engines, I consider this very satisfactory." (Name given).
The Safix Miller Outboard Motor is 2½ h.p., speed 8 miles, weighs 70lb, equipped with Dixie H.T. magneto and reverse propeller, ready to attach to any boat in a minute. A SALE UNPRECEDENTED FOR ITS SUPREME VALUE GIVING.
LASSETTER'S
GREAT SUMMER DRAPERY SALE,
STARTS ON MONDAY MORNING AT 9 O'CLOCK,
AND CONTINUES UNTIL FEBRUARY 2.

Lassetter's Semi-annual Sales are always awaited with keen interest, as they serve a double purpose.

They sustain the principle incorporated into this business from its very foundation, that all stocks must be fresh each season, and they demonstrate, as nothing else possibly could, the power of this organisation for far-reaching economy.

This Sale will show more forcibly than ever before the ability of this store to accomplish things that will prove of widest benefit to the people.

All classes of goods have advanced considerably in price during the past twelve months, and will advance more so in the near future. We would, therefore, advise those people who are economically inclined to take full advantage of our Sale Prices, as by doing so they will materially benefit.

We can say in all truth that it is impossible in many instances for us to buy to-day at the prices we are selling at.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO SAVE ON FURNITURE, ELECTROPLATED WARE, AND JEWELLERY.

During the Sale we will give 10 per cent. discount on all cash purchases in the Furniture, Electroplated Ware, and Jewellery Departments.

A GOOD SECOND-HAND CAR Bought at the right price is a better investment than a new car. A new car depreciates from 20 to 50 per cent. the first year, while a good second-hand car, bought at the right price, shows only a low depreciation even after years of service.
This is a fact worth your earnest consideration, and it is worth while considering also, whether there is not an added advantage in purchasing a second-hand car from a firm who will guarantee its condition.
Best of European and American cars in stock. Demonstrations at any time by appointment.

MORE MILEAGE—AND LESS PETROL USED.
PALMER CORD TYRES. PALMER CORD TYRES.
Here is the very economy the motorist most needs—economy of tyres and of petrol. How to achieve it? Fit Palmer Cord Tyres. Practical tests have proved that they will run more miles per petrol gallon than any tyres containing canvas. "Palmers" have instead of a canvas foundation an impervious base of impregnated cords. Get our booklet, "Factors in Economical Motoring." It gives the reason and the proof.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR.
LOW COST OF MAINTENANCE.
DUE TO ITS EXCELLENT CONSTRUCTION.
AN EXTRAORDINARY NUMBER OF OWNERS HAVE LITTLE OR NO OCCASION TO CALL ON THE AUSTRALIAN AGENTS FOR SERVICE.
IT IS BECOMING CLEAR THAT WITH A LITTLE CARE AND A TRIFLING EXPENDITURE A CAR BUILT AS DODGE BROTHERS' CAR IS BUILT CAN MAINTAIN ITSELF FOR AN INDEFINITE PERIOD.
THIS IS NOT AN ACCIDENTAL, NOR AN OCCASIONAL RESULT.
IT IS THE GENERAL EXPERIENCE, DUE TO THE DESIGN OF THE CAR.
ITS LIGHT, STRONG CONSTRUCTION WAS CAREFULLY CALCULATED TO PROMOTE ECONOMY AS WELL AS CAPABLE PERFORMANCE.
DALGETY AND COMPANY, LIMITED, AGENTS, 136-138 PHILLIP-ST, SYDNEY.
Telephones: City 9471-9472.

THE HUDSON SUPER-SIX.
SUPREMACY CLEAR AND INDISPUTABLE.
GREATLY INCREASED MOTOR EFFICIENCY.
THE HUDSON SUPER-SIX SUPREMACY IS CLEAR AND INDISPUTABLE. OFFICIAL TESTS HAVE PROVED IT.
IT DELIVERS 76 HORSE-POWER. THAT IS 80 PER CENT. MORE THAN THE BEST OF FORMER LIKE SIZE MOTORS.
THIS IS ACCOMPLISHED BY ENDING VIBRATION. BY ATTAINING SUCH SMOOTHNESS AS NEVER BEFORE WAS KNOWN.
NO MORE POWER IS CREATED—NO MORE FUEL CONSUMED—AT ANY CERTAIN MOTOR SPEED. BUT THE UTTER SMOOTHNESS TRANSFORMS ALL THAT POWER INTO PERFORMANCE.
ALL THIS, REMEMBER, THROUGH THE ENDING OF VIBRATION, A MOTOR'S GREATEST FOE.
Telephones: City 9471-9472.

"THE Oakland SENSIBLE-SIX"
IS A BIG CAR. The seats have ample width to accommodate 5 large people without any crowding, also providing more legroom than any other car in its class.
VERY POWERFUL. The six-cylinder valve-in-head motor is rated at 19.6 R.A.C., but it develops 41 actual h.p. at 25.00 r.p.m., being 1 h.p. for every 55lb of car weight.
EXCEPTIONALLY ECONOMICAL. The medium weight—wonderful springs—small, efficient engine—and over size tyres, have resulted in producing exceptional economy in running expenses. 25-30 miles to the gallon of petrol and 10,000 miles on a set of tyres are often obtained by Oakland owners.
AND COMFORTABLE. The long wheelbase and 51-inch semi elliptic rear springs, underslung, produce a riding comfort which will surprise any motorist.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

The German Emperor's Stroke of Luck—Another Vote of Credit—New Peerages—Trafalgar Square.

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 3.

At the outbreak of war the German Emperor suffered many disappointments, causing his well-laid plans to "gang agley." First and most important was the discovery honestly amazing to his mind, that England, faithful to solemn treaties, would not stand aside leaving Belgium to her fate. In succession followed bitter disappointment of cherished conviction that if England went to war India and Ireland would break forth in revolt, and that the Boers would seize the opportunity of recapturing Cape Colony, fulfilling their avowed intention of 17 years ago by driving the English into the sea. None of these things happened. On the contrary, India and Ireland, especially Ireland, sent to England's help in the field battalions of their bravest men, whilst it was the Boers under the command of Botha and Smuts who captured German colonies in South Africa.

At length consolation and help came from an unexpected quarter. The defection of Russia has not turned the tide of war but it has certainly stemmed it. Had our ally continued the victorious march westward begun, and for a while maintained, under the command of the Grand Duke Nicholas, there would certainly be no necessity for another winter campaign. As things have turned out the Germans, day by day driven back from their fastnesses in France and Flanders, have pushed forward on two other fronts of the far-flung battlefield. Forcing their way into Russia and threatening its capital they have met with so little resistance that they have been able to withdraw a whole army from the Eastern front and fling it into Italy.

This double stroke of unexpected good fortune has results not less important in a moral than in a material aspect. At a time when famished Germany is pining for peace the national spirit is uplifted by these triumphs. They will not affect the final issue which England and France and the United States are pledged to accomplish. But they will unhappily prolong the struggle.

With accustomed unanimity and unvaried readiness the House of Commons has passed another vote of credit, being the fourth of the current year. The 400 millions asked for were, moreover, voted with the knowledge that it will not be the last demanded in the current year. Before the House adjourns at the approach of Christmas a fifth vote will be called for. The money actually voted to date reaches the fabulous figure of five thousand six hundred and ninety-two millions sterling. The next vote will bring the expenditure up to a sum exceeding six thousand millions.

Whilst this hardly-earned sum of the people's money is ungrudgingly provided in pursuance of the resolute purpose of fighting the war out to the winning point, there is an undercurrent of uneasiness that an appreciable percentage is wasted in extravagance of maladministration. Such result is inevitable in carrying on a great war. Provision of supplies of all kinds is of necessity left in the hands of naval and military officers. Their mission is to beat the enemy, and, lacking business training, they become the easy prey of the sharks who batten on the public funds in their dealings with various State departments. Of late the newspapers have given daily reports of a case of organised fraud which, whilst exceptional in its boldly unscrupulous working, is to a lamentable extent representative of an established practice. Something in the direction of checking extravagance may be expected from the work of the Select Committee on National Expenditure appointed in this fourth year of the war. But the leakage of three preceding years is irreparable.

The House of Lords is not disposed to overlook the scandal connected with the latest bestowal of peerages. It has this week passed a resolution demanding that a declaration to the Sovereign should be made by the Prime Minister in recommending any person to his Majesty's favour for any honour or dignity, that he has satisfied himself that no payment or expectation of payment to any party fund is directly or indirectly associated with the grant or promise of such honour or dignity. This is a reasonable demand, which has behind it the support of public approval, a condition not always applicable to the action of the Lords. The movement is necessarily free from ordinary party politics. It is a two-handed sword that strikes with equal force at the head of Liberal and Conservative Premiers.

It is true that the just indignation of noble lords has been aroused by personal feeling against the admission to their select circle of a gentleman estimable in his way, but who certainly could not be expected to obtain a coronet by other methods than that of purchase. There is nothing new about the practice whether in the accounts of Liberal or Conservative Governments. A particular transaction happens to be a little more than usually flagrant and was, therefore less likely to escape attention. But the general basis of elevation to the peerage is not calculated to strengthen the House of Lords. That body is largely recruited from the Commons in payment of political services, or in recognition of the fact that, whether from growing incapacity owing to advancing age or from other cause, a once active partisan is not of further use in the work-a-day world of what is sometimes called the Lower House.

I have several times alluded to the metamorphosis of St. James's Park, one of the not least striking indirect results of the war. The smallest, partly by reason thereof, the most beautiful of London parks, it has become a populous hamlet of day-workers in various State departments. The marvel began when those whose good fortune it was daily to pass through the park discovered that the ornamental water, one of its chief attractions, was drained off. This was done as a means of lessening the danger of bombs falling on or about Buckingham Palace. For two years there remained an ugly scar on the greenery. Now it is covered with lines of offices. The latest open space utilised for a similar purpose is Trafalgar Square. Its historic pavement, sacred to the memory of many violent speeches and some riots, has been partly broken up, and on it built a recruiting office for the Women's Army Corps. A pleasant variation from the severity of architectural design in St. James's Park is given by some touches of a rural cottage. The business of the organisation at the present time is to supply the urgent need of the State-controlled firms engaged in making aeroplanes. The supply of men falling short of demand, it has been discovered that women can, after brief training, do much of the work.

London, supposed to be empty just now, is exceedingly busy, having night work added on to the day's business. At half-past one this morning I was awakened by the sound of heavy gun firing. There was no doubt as to what it portended. The Huns were at it again, and these were our defenders bidding them good morning. For a full hour the thunder raged, sometimes so near that it seemed in the street on which the bedroom window looked, later in the distance. Occasionally it stopped for a moment, then burst forth again with renewed vigour. As there was nothing useful to be done, I went off to sleep again, whether whilst the guns were still roaring or after they had ceased I really could not say. I was awakened once more by a pleasanter interruption. It was the special constables, some on bicycles, others in motor cars, sounding two notes on a bugle announcing "All clear." At the moment of writing no official news has been circulated particularising damage done. According to the testimony of that infallible person, the man in the street, none has happened. The encircling concentrated fire of our guns kept the midnight invader outside the range of the sleeping millions. If that be so, it is a reassuring triumphant fact that one would imagine the authorities would make haste to blazon through the world. But the ways of the censor are past finding out.

THE PACIFIC ISLANDS.

AUSTRALIA'S RELATIONSHIP.

(BY THOS. J. McMAHON.)

There is no portion of the wide world that must assuredly be thrust into a greater prominence by the final issues of this war than the far-spreading insular empire of the sweeping South Pacific Ocean. The fact that Australia is neighboured by many groups of rich islands, points quite naturally to the probability that one day there will be created and developed an Australian Empire within the great British Empire. In ten years' time these Pacific islands, in the most generous promises that they now give, will, by the magnitude of their commercial prospects, be the magnet of an extensive trade, and their zone one of wonderful commercial activity.

The question of the future of the Pacific, with its great trade potentialities, which will undoubtedly be the feature of interest to many peoples of the world, is, will there be one paramount exclusive Power, or many Powers? Is there to be one flag over these scattered territories, meaning peace, harmony, and security, or many flags, meaning war, strife, and insecurity? And what people is to be the dominant power is the particular issue to be impatiently awaited at the conclusion of this struggle of nations. Is it to be a people for right or might, for fair possession or brutal dispossession? The decision of this question is urgently of most importance—or should be—to Australians. The building up of the new world and its new map will reveal many changes of names, of ownership, and of the colours which denote nationality. Are the maps of the future to show these attractive islands of the Pacific coloured red for British, or black for Germany; or, possibly, is there some new tint to mark some new unexpected Power emerging victorious and paramount out of this cauldron of human strife? The asking of these questions but too evidently discloses the fact that clouds, hanging low, sombre, and murky, obscure this future of the Pacific at the present juncture, and never in all the days of the war more so than in those of the new year of 1918. This means that by every tie of close relationship, geographically and otherwise, there is a moral force of national pride demanding that Australia strike for that future now, forcing at least a rift in the murky clouds, that she may see something of her destiny, and its connection with the future of the great island world of the Pacific in the Southern Hemisphere.

The development of the last twenty years that has gone on in these fertile islands—"dreams of fertility," as a recent writer has described them—has been little heeded by the world around. It has been silent, but none the less tremendous, amazingly extensive, and wonderful. And no eye has been bent upon that progress more shrewdly, or has gloated more gluttonously, than the greedy and ambitious eye of Germany. Out of that greed and ambition has been born the last child of German aspirations; a grand German colonial Empire in the Pacific, with Australia as the crowning territorial jewel.

There are already other competitors for the control of the magnificent commercial offerings that now lie in the lap of fortune in this Pacific world. But the chief success of these islands and their administration is due to one Power, one flag, one weal. Now is the time most opportune to secure a decision for the future that will assure the destinies of this insular world running sympathetically with the destinies of Australia.

Australians would do well to inquire more diligently into the progress and prospects of these Pacific islands, especially those most contiguous to their shores, such as Papua, the Solomons, and particularly German New Guinea. These islands are not, as far too many people think, mere scattered groves of cocoanut, and haunts of naked savages. Rather, are they already, indeed, by keen enterprise and wonderful development commercial assets of incalculable value. British and Australian enterprise, with British and Australian capital, have brought them at this very moment to the point of even profitableness. A famous English statesman, during a visit to Australia many years ago, uttered these remarkable words: "Australia's destiny is to be the trustee of the Pacific." That utterance to-day should be to all true Australians something more than remarkable; it should be prophetic, and even more, it should be an ambitious incentive for the achievement that means the winning of this surrounding island world, immediate as well as distant, as partners in a new Pacific Empire, crowned by British recognition and protection. Let Australians think and then endeavour to realise what commercial success means in the future of the Pacific; let them think of the millions of fertile acres awaiting development in these islands; and of the hundreds of thousands of acres already prolific with the cultivation of tropical products. Cocoanut, for instance, in which there are unlimited possibilities, not only as good products for man, is adding every day to the debt which is due to it from civilisation. This cocoanut which gives the finest quality of margarine (useful in so many ways for so many trades), gives also one of the most terrible and successful explosive agencies known to the Allies. Crops of rubber, sisal-hemp, and tobacco, are now superabundant in growth. Cocoa, coffee, nutmegs, cotton, sugar, rice, and many other products but await demand, and there is the cheap labour and the most congenial of soils for their supplies in ample abundance. Oil from Papua is no longer a doubtful proposition, but a commercial fact of significance. Combine all these with the resources, inexhaustible as they are estimated to be, of Australia, and there is assured a future of the happiest, because of the independence of the economic position. Tropical products essential to many of the main industries of the world may be produced here in lavish proportions. It should need no effort of imagination to realise the importance of this commercial truth. It cannot be possible that Australia's men of commerce will let slip the opportunities of the Pacific, or that Australia's interests in these islands will be indifferent or naught.

These islands undoubtedly are making progress, and in leaps and bounds. But they cannot be hampered by the selfish policies estranging them already from Australia. Petitions are abroad praying for deliverance from a prospective Australian administration, and enumerating Australian faults, and even flouting Australian friendship. The clouds of war not only obscure the vision of the future of the island world of the Pacific, as it is most conjunctive to Australia, but Australia's industrial unrest and its gross selfishness mark it out for hatred, discredit and opprobrium, and the greatest haters of Australia in these islands are Australians.

Australians must never lose sight of the ominous facts of the success and ambitions of the Germans in the Pacific. They have in the fullest measure benefited by their sojourn in German New Guinea, a territory of strategical, as well as commercial, importance, particularly so, owing to its nearness to the empty and unprotected shores of the north of the Commonwealth. So rich and so well developed is this fine island territory, made up of many groups, that unhesitatingly it may be affirmed that all the millions to which Australia is now committed for the continuance of this war, and her share towards maintaining the Empire, will, if the Allies are victorious, be more than recouped. German New Guinea was but the half-way house, in a sense, to Australia, and it is to-day the greatest regret of the Germans that in these territories they did not have an army of soldiers to pounce upon Australia at the beginning of the war. This, the Germans in German New Guinea say, would have been quite an easy matter. The grabbing Germany of pre-war days is undefeated, and, what is worse, unrepentant in these days. The full significance of this is of grave importance to Australians.

The future of the Pacific should march with the future of Australia, and with the future of the British Empire, for a continuance of which the flower of this noble Empire's manhood, side by side with the manhood of the nations of the earth that love and honour freedom, are now heroically and willingly giving up their sacred lives. Let us hope the nobleness of the supreme sacrifice will free the world and enable the British Empire to rise more gloriously, with Australia as the shining star, an Empire of an Empire.

THE CHURCHES.

ELECTION OF A CANON.

A meeting of the clergy summoned and of lay representatives to the Synod of the diocese of Sydney was held in the chapter-house yesterday afternoon for the purpose of electing a canon of St. Andrew's Cathedral in succession to the late Rev. Canon Mervyn Archdall. There were five nominations for the office, namely, the Rev. Canon Goddard (hon. Canon), rector of All Saints', Petersham; the Rev. E. H. Lea, rector of St. Mark's, Darling Point; the Rev. W. J. Cakebread, rector of St. Jude's, Randwick; the Rev. E. H. B. Claydon, rector of St. Luke's, Concord and Burwood; and the Rev. W. L. Langley, rector of All Saints', Woollahra, with Edgecliff. It was announced at the close of the meeting that the Rev. Ernest Henry Beale Claydon had been declared elected. The Dean of Sydney presided. The induction service will be announced at a later date.

The new canon-elect was ordained deacon in 1893 and priest in 1895 by the then Bishop of Sydney. He was curate of St. Luke's, Burwood, from 1893 to 1899, and was rector of Springwood, with Glenbrook, Lawson, and Wentworth Falls, from 1899 to 1903. From the latter year to 1909 he was rector of All Souls', Leichhardt, and he has been rector of St. Luke's, Concord and Burwood, since 1909. In 1910, the Archbishop appointed him one of his chaplains. He was elected clerical secretary to the Sydney Diocesan Synod in 1911, and of the Provincial Synod of New South Wales in 1917. He has also been hon. clerical secretary of the Church Missionary Society for a number of years.

Archbishop Wright is likely to be absent in Tasmania for some time.

To-morrow's services in St. Andrew's Cathedral will be taken by Dean Talbot in the morning, and by the Rev. G. M. Searcy, B.A., Oxon., at night.

To-morrow night, at 7 o'clock, Dean Talbot will unveil a roll of honour at St. Peter's, Cook's River.

To-morrow morning, at 8 o'clock, Archbishop Cattaneo, the Papal Delegate, will celebrate the Communion Mass of the Hibernian Society in St. Mary's Cathedral, and will afterwards accompany Archbishop Kelly to the annual breakfast of the society, which is to be held in the Town Hall.

Archbishop Kelly was on a visit to Camden this week.

The thirty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavour Society will be celebrated by a conference and rally on Saturday, February 2. The New South Wales Christian Endeavour Union is arranging the celebration, the Lindfield Methodist Church having been secured for the purpose for the afternoon and evening. The president (Rev. R. J. Williams), the president-elect (Rev. P. W. Phillips), and the President of the Methodist Church (Rev. P. J. Stephen), among others, are expected to take a prominent part in the celebrations.

The Chairman of the New South Wales Congregational Union (Rev. N. J. Cocks, M.A.) has returned from the University Christian Union Conference at Mittagong, and will conduct to-morrow's services at the Pitt-street Church. Mr. Cocks joins with others who took part in the conference in expressing the opinion that it was a particularly helpful spiritual gathering.

The Moderator-General of the Presbyterian Church (Professor Macintyre) will spend a month or more in the New England district. Professor Macintyre has been ordered a complete rest from all work, including preaching, and the addressing of public meetings.

After 25 years' distinguished missionary service in New Guinea, the Rev. J. H. Holmes is in Sydney, having, for the time being, at all events, relinquished his work at that outpost. Mr. Holmes is a member of the Congregational Church ministry.

A commission has been sent from Sydney for the ordination, as chaplain at the front, of Mr. F. E. Pulsford, B.A., pastor of the Waterloo Congregational Church. Mr. Pulsford is now at the front.

The services at the Lyceum Hall to-morrow will be observed as Home and Foreign Missions Sunday. The addresses will be delivered by the Rev. G. H. Hewitt, at the 11 a.m. family service, and the Rev. J. G. M. Taylor, at the People's Service at 7.15 p.m. The speaker at the "People's Own," from 3 to 4.30 p.m., will be the Rev. B. Danks.

Colonel Birkenshaw, divisional commander of the Sydney division of the Salvation Army, has returned from Tasmania.

SOCIAL.

Market day, in aid of All Saints' Church, Sutton Forest, was held on Wednesday. Sir James Fairfax performed the opening ceremony. Lady Fairfax was presented with a bouquet of heather by Miss Alison Sewell. The attendance numbered over 300. The amount raised was £92. Mrs. A. A. Carter was hon. sec.

A flourishing branch of the Red Cross Society exists at Young, which has 13 working circles united to form a grand central branch under Mrs. C. J. Metcalfe as organising hon secretary. These circles each contributed to the £100 sent a few months ago to the Prisoners of War Fund. Another £100 was sent to France's Day Fund, and still another £100 is being sent to the British Our Day appeal. Young branch sent special gifts to Randwick Hospital for Christmas, 1917, as follows:—Three mechanical rubber-tyred chairs, costing £24 each, one from Young centre, Marengo circle, and Thuddungra circle; £5 was sent by Balabla circle for the purchase of two easy chairs.

At the Joan of Arc committee rooms, Sargent's, 306 Pitt-street, a distribution of useful garments was made to the wives and relations of soldiers on Thursday, when a pleasant time was spent in afternoon tea and chatting.

A wedding was solemnised at St. James's Church, King-street, Sydney, on December 31, between William Norman, eldest son of the late Mr. J. T. Beaumont, of Murringo Station, Young, N.S.W., and Mrs. Beaumont, of Murringo, King-street, Ashfield, and Marie, eldest daughter of Mrs. White, of Auckland, N.Z. The Rev. Horace Crotty officiated. The bride, who was given away by Mr. A. J. Wilgoss, was attended by Miss Elise Bruce (N.Z.), whilst Lieut. A. O. M'Philliamy acted as best man. The reception was held at Petty's Hotel, and Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont left afterwards for a motor tour to the Blue Mountains.

At Randwick Presbyterian Church on January 5 the Rev. C. H. Talbot performed the ceremony of marriage between Major Herbert Leslie Bruce, M.C., second son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Henry Bruce, East Maitland, and Esme May, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carloss, Warrington, Coogee. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of ivory tulle, touched with pink, and tulle veil, and spray of orange blossom. Miss Enid Carloss (sister of the bride), and Miss Ivy Bruce (sister of the bridegroom), were bridesmaids, wearing frocks of pink crepe-de-Chine and pink aerophane hats, with touches of black. The best man was Captain Allen, M.C., and Mr. Vean, M.C., was groomsman. The reception was held at the Wentworth, Church Hill. Major and Mrs. Bruce left for their honeymoon, to be spent at Medlow and Jenolan Caves, the bride going away in a creme gabardine coat and skirt, and a Tuscan hat. The bridegroom gave the bride a case of dressing-table silver, and his gifts to the bridesmaids were their bouquets of pink carnations, and a diamond ring and wristlet watch.

At St. Paul's, Wahroonga, November 17, Aubrey, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ponton, of Bolingbroke, Hornsby, was married to Edith, fifth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Cheetham, Sherwood, Thornleigh. Rev. Stephen Taylor, B.A., performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a frock of white crepe de Chine, also wreath and veil, and carried a bouquet of white heather and lilies. Miss Ellen Cheetham (sister of the bride) attended as bridesmaid, her dress being white crepe de Chine, relieved with Georgette, and also wearing black silk net hat, with mauve grape trimmings, her bouquet was of mauve sweet peas. Mr. Frank Creighton, of Hornsby, was best man. The reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. The young couple left later for Melbourne, the bride wearing an Assam costume, with hat to match.

A wedding was celebrated on December 27 at the Church of England, Pymble, by the Rev. L. A. Pearce, B.A., when the Rev. H. W. Barder, only surviving son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Barder, was married to Dulcie Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Readford. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of rich white corded silk, with point lace trimming. The veil was surmounted by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her bouquet and a diamond ring were gifts of the bridegroom. The Misses Elsie Campbell and Olive Barder were bridesmaids, wearing frocks of white crepe-de-Chine, their hats had touches of pink and blue. They carried shower bouquets, which, with gold and pearl bangles, were the gifts of the bridegroom. Captain L. J. Hempton acted as best man, and Mr. Roy H. Readford as groomsman. The bride's mother held a reception at Allister Brae, Pymble, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. Head. The honeymoon is being spent on the Mountains.

ENGAGEMENT.

The engagement is announced of George G. St. Clair, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Potts, of Hawkesbury College, Richmond, to Nona, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Henn-Gennys, of Glen Innes.

REAL ESTATE.

TWO LARGE CITY PROPERTIES.

Although the real estate market, for ordinary-sized investments, has not quite settled down after the New Year holidays, two large properties have changed hands—one of them a shop premises in George-street, the purchase price of which was £39,500, and the other No. 3 O'Connell-street, known as Marlborough-chambers, from the trustees of the W. C. von der Heyde estate, the purchaser being the Union Trustee Company of Australia, Ltd. Hardie and Gorman, Ltd., were the agents through whom the George-street property sale was effected, and Mr. E. W. A. Kendall for the O'Connell-street property. The latter has a frontage of 61 feet 8¼ inches to O'Connell-street, widening to 69 feet at the rear. On the southern boundary its depth is 106 feet 6 inches, and on the northern 97 feet 4 inches. The purchase price for this property has not been disclosed, but it is understood to work out somewhere in the neighbourhood of £330 a foot. On it the Union Trustee Company proposes later on to erect offices.

Indoor auctions have been held during the week, and although the sales have not been large, yet agents generally agree in reporting that the tone of the market is encouraging. Several sales have been effected. Richardson and Wrench report, amongst other transactions, the sale of a cottage, Alabone-street, Ashfield, £850; cottage, Concord-street, Strathfield, £900; block of land, Clareville Beach Estate, Newport, £200; land at Cronulla (in conjunction with Lance Giddings), £60; two allotments, Mount Pleasant Estate, Normanhurst, £165; allotment of land, Williams Estate, Kyle Bay, Hurstville, £180; allotment, Terry's Estate, Eastwood, first subdivision, £112/10/; allotment, same estate, seventh subdivision, 26/ a foot; two allotments, Delmar Park Estate subdivision, Dee Why, 35/ a foot; and two allotments, same estate, 27/6 a foot. At auction yesterday the same company sold, subject to approval, a house, Crystal-street, Petersham, for £675; cottage at Wilberforce-street, Rose Bay (also subject to approval), £700; allotment of land, Howard-avenue, Oakes Estate, Dee Why, 27/6 a foot; and four water-frontage blocks, near Wagstaff's wharf, Woy Woy, £400.

Hardie and Gorman, Ltd., report, in addition to the city property mentioned above, the sale of a brick cottage at Burwood-Concord, Wharf-street, £1045; two allotments of land, Manly, with 106 feet to Jackson-street, £330; allotments at Hurstville, fronting West-street, £1 a foot.

Stanton and Son, Ltd., report having sold the following properties during the week:—Brick cottage, Marion-street, Haberfield, £1050; brick cottage, Victoria-street, Ashfield, £960; brick cottage, Neich-parade, Burwood, £800; brick cottage, Anderson-street, Belmore, £750; brick cottage, Gladstone-avenue, Belmore, £700.

Raine and Horne, Ltd., report the following among the transactions of the week:—Two factories at Alexandria at £490 and £800 respectively; three blocks of land at Pittwater at £250, £100, and £20 each; allotment at Bellevue Hill, £137/10/; property at Neutral Bay, £364.

Hugh Duff and Co. (A. T. Carpenter) report a fair attendance at their sale in the rooms on Thursday. £750 was offered and refused for a cottage at Burwood; £3 per foot for land, Major Bay-road, Concord, was declined; and £4/15/ per foot for a block of land in Royliston-street, Paddington.

Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report satisfactory transactions for the week. Numerous inquiries continue to be received for general sites, but the demand for farmlet propositions was considerably in excess of the others. Several good sales were effected at Bankstown, Ingleburn, and Toongabbie of areas of from 5 to 16 acres. Several building blocks at Kensington, Bexley, and Granville found buyers, as well as beach lots at Woy Woy. During the early summer the firm will auction two splendid subdivisions, one at Vaucluse, and the other at Warrimoo, the new Blue Mountain pleasure resort. Due notice of such sales will be given in the daily Press.

Peach Brothers, of Kogarah and Sydney, report their sales of properties in Arncliffe, Bexley, West Kogarah, Rockdale, Kogarah, Sans Souci, Carlton, and Hurstville for the year ended December 31, 1917, as over £64,000. The following sales have been made during the week:—Cottages at Bexley, West Kogarah, Kogarah, and Carlton, £780, £675, £630, £240, £200, lots 25 and 26, Carlton Park Estate, £75, land at Taren Point, £220; and land, Station-street, £130.

Forthcoming sales are:—This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Stanton and Son, Ltd., will submit at auction, 65 Crown land lots at Maroubra. This land fronts Broad-road and Maroubra Bay-road, and is on the proposed tram route of the extension line to Maroubra Beach. The North Steyne Manly Beach Estate, fronting Collingwood-street, Manly, will be offered by Stanton and Son, Ltd., on the grounds on Saturday, February 23. These allotments represent the last available land in subdivision near the North Steyne Ocean Beach.

Hardie and Gorman will submit the Seaview Estate, South Head, to auction this afternoon. This property lies about 350 yards south of the lighthouse, and about 200 yards from the old South Head-road tram stop.

Richardson and Wrench, Limited, will submit 29 building sites at South Strathfield this afternoon, and during next week several properties in various suburbs.

Kneeshaw, Henry Lunney, and Edward Quinn, late of the Prisons' Department; and Mr. Edward M'Hugh, late of the Sydney Harbour Trust.

BOTANY BAY DISASTER.

The Acting City Coroner (Mr. J. Jamieson) held an inquiry yesterday into the death of Johann Ristkok, a Russian, who was one of the victims of the Botany Bay boating disaster on December 31, and whose body was recovered by Constables Gillies and Moreland in the vicinity of Doughboy Point. Ristkok, with three companions, named Gordon Wilson, Rudolph Olsen, and Henry Haberfield, decided on a fishing excursion to Botany Bay. A southerly wind blew up, and the sea quickly became rough. Before the men had time to make for shelter they were caught in the storm, and the launch was swamped. Haberfield and Wilson were drowned, and their bodies have not yet been recovered. Olsen succeeded in reaching the shore, but Ristkok was struck by a huge wave, which hurled him on the rocks.

After some evidence was taken the inquiry was adjourned till Monday next.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Hemsley says, in his letter this morning, that Mr. Hughes's words merely meant that he would resign if the electors answered "No." Mr. Hughes's words were: "We shall not attempt to carry on the government of the country." But, apart from the words used, which have a clear meaning, the question is, How were the words understood by the public? If Mr. Hughes had stated, at the time he used the words, that they did not exclude the course of action he has now taken, Mr. Hughes would have been told that he was only trifling with a serious issue.

I hardly think the memorandum of the Governor-General supports Mr. Hemsley's view, that it is a judgment on the moral issue involved in this question. His Excellency makes it clear beyond all doubt that his action was "determined solely by the Parliamentary situation." If I may say so without disrespect, it would have been quite wrong, from a constitutional point of view, for his Excellency to have been influenced by any other considerations. I imagine that the Governor-General himself will be very surprised to learn that his action amounts to an implied assertion that Mr. Hughes's present conduct is consistent with his statement at Bendigo.

I am, etc.,
T. R. BAVIN.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE CRIME.

In 1915 appeared "J'Accuse," an arraignment of Germany and her responsibility for the war, written by a German in Switzerland. Any initial suspicions about the authenticity of the book were dissipated by its reception in Germany. Its importation was banned; heavyweight professors and publicists fell upon it tooth and nail; its allegations were officially denied. But the author has returned to the charge in "The Crime," in which he elaborates and expands the arguments of "J'Accuse," adduces a good deal of new material which was not available at the time of its publication, and replies to his various critics. Incidentally, he complains of the unfairness of the German authorities, who allowed the people to read the answers to "J'Accuse," but not the book itself. But surely he does not seriously imagine that the powers that be would ever permit the circulation of so damaging an indictment if they could possibly prevent it.

The author anticipates two criticisms which may be urged against "The Crime." In the first place, it may be argued that the time has not yet come to endeavour to affix the responsibility for the war finally and definitely. The documents on which such an inquiry must be based contain so many suppressions and falsifications that they lose much of their value as historical material. Moreover, any estimate, however honestly it strives to be impartial, must inevitably be coloured by the passions and antagonisms of the day. The author does not agree with this point of view. There is no such thing as absolute impartiality in history, and the factor of prejudice will still be present a century hence. As to the inadequacy of the material, he observes that the belligerent governments not only think that the time is ripe for a judgment, but have actually invited a judgment. Each belligerent has stated his own case in one of the multi-coloured "books" containing the diplomatic correspondence of the period just antecedent to the war. If these documents reveal evasions or omissions so much the worse for the case. The Governments must stand by their manifestoes: it is, as it were, a verdict arrived at by the hearing of affidavits. The second objection anticipated by the author is that some may ask whether at this time of day any practical purpose is served by continuing to discuss the question of guilt. Two years ago it was of vital importance not only to reassure the belligerent peoples, but to influence neutral opinion. But now most have already made up their minds, and the rest feel that the question of responsibility is academic at this stage. The war will be won by military operations and not by any reliance on the consciousness of guilt on the part of the enemy. The author is quite aware of this, but insists that the moral element has a practical bearing on the issue even now. As the months wear on war weariness increases, and people become more critical. They ask themselves what they are fighting for, and they are not so readily put off with catchwords. If the answer of their heart and mind is that they are fighting for democracy and humanity, they will be more inclined to continue their sacrifices than if they feel that they are the puppets of dynastic ambition which has plunged the world in blood.

The author's plan is to take in turn each of the replies to "J'Accuse," dissect it, and demonstrate its weakness. Certainly Germany has been singularly unfortunate in her champions. These include such celebrities as Dr. Helfferich, Secretary of the Interior; Professors H. S. Chamberlain and Schiemann, Rohrbach of colonial fame, and other lesser luminaries; but for a race that prides itself on its logical faculty, they display an extraordinary lack of dialectical skill. The confusion of post hoc and propter hoc, the fallacy of petitio principii, all the most obvious errors of argument are to be found in profusion in their apologies. To take one example, and that by no means the most glaring. Dr. Helfferich declares that Russia is the guilty party. For him "the occasion of the war was the general mobilisation of the Russian forces, ordered on the morning of July 31." The fact of mobilisation proves to him that Russia instigated the war, and "all the preceding incidents since July 23, so far as they exist at all for Dr. Helfferich, serve only to illustrate the guilt of Russia which he had already established on the second page of his pamphlet." His history begins with July 31. There is hardly a word about the Austrian ultimatum to Servia, the request of the Entente for a prolongation of the time limit, the various proposals (including one from the Czar) to submit the whole matter to the mediation of the Hague tribunal. "A traveller is attacked. In defence he draws his knife, and wounds his assailant. He who ignores the assault will condemn the man who was attacked; he who investigates the incident will acquit him. Exactly the same thing holds in the consideration of the Russian mobilisation."

The replies to "J'Accuse," says the author, showed the existence of three schools of thought in Germany, each of which blamed a different belligerent for the war. The fact that their theories are mutually inconsistent troubles them not at all. There is the Russian school, of which Helfferich is the principal representative. There is the French school, headed by H. S. Chamberlain, who believes that while Russia made a genuine attempt to preserve peace, France, in an uncompromising spirit of revenge, precipitated the conflict. He utterly ignores the July debate in the Senate, which showed that France desired anything rather than war. He lays stress upon the hostile act of certain French airmen who are alleged to have flown over German territory. In point of fact, the only substantive evidence on this matter is that of a German paper which denied the report. The third school, the Anglo-Belgian, is very popular in Germany, because not only does it affix the responsibility for the war on the hated Britain, but it justifies the invasion of Belgium. It alleges a secret agreement between Belgium and Britain, constituting an infringement of neutrality, and detrimental to Germany's interests; in support of this is produced a report of General Ducarne, "Conventions Anglo-Belges," which was found after the occupation of Belgium. But what does this amount to? "Belgium made preparations for her defence uniformly on all sides, and against all the great Powers." Each year the General Staff took up a particular strategic problem to which all study, preparation, and tours of instruction were directed. In 1906 and 1909 the staff problem was the defence of Belgium against Germany, in 1907 and 1910 the potential enemy was France; in 1908 it was Britain. Belgium had simply made arrangements that in any contingency, or with any combination of the Powers, her neutrality would be safeguarded.

It is impossible to follow the author through his very careful and exhaustive analysis of the documents relating to the war issued by the various belligerents. They point quite irresistibly to the conclusion (cynically admitted by Maximilian Harden, the enfant terrible of the German Press, and others) that Germany and no one else willed the war. "I venture to hope," he says, "that my first and second arraignments, taken together, will at last incontrovertibly decide, even in the eyes of the German people, the question of the guilt of this war, which for the rest of the world is to-day already a settled matter." Let him cherish no vain illusions. The German people will not be convinced by this book. They will not have the opportunity of reading it if the German authorities know their business. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

TEMPORARY HEROES.

"Temporary Heroes," by Mr. Cecil Sommers, is a collection of extremely volatile letters from the front to a supposititious sweetheart at home. The author, one gathers, is a lieutenant in a battalion of Highlanders, and though the "Jock" is usually depicted as a dour and lugubrious individual, this regiment is certainly an exception to the rule. It consists of incorrigible optimists. From the O.C. downwards they are cheerful with a cheerfulness that nothing can damp. Their accounts of the inferno of the Ypres salient, where they held the line for some time, suggest nothing so much as a gay Continental [illegible] of side-shows and elaborate pyrotechnic displays provided gratis. When two of them have their trench blown in on top of them by a high explosive shell and are buried for half an hour, the first thing that one does after being dug out and returned to consciousness is to say to his companion, "Man, yon's grand. D'ye ken we've escapit the afternoon fatigue?" The appalling mud is something to joke about, especially when someone else falls in.

The author is a genial soul, who finds it difficult to think ill of or speak ill of anyone, even the Boche. He will run a bayonet through the latter with a genuine feeling of regret at the necessity. He has even a kind word to say for the British staff. It has its faults, he observes, but he has never yet met a British soldier who would prefer to have the German staff over him. Of the whole army the man who arouses his most generous enthusiasm is the lance-corporal. "Lloyd George," he says, "claims that silver bullets are going to win the war. According to Lord Northcliffe it is high explosives. Others mention the navy, the Russian steam roller, the liquor restrictions, and what not. I heard one man say that the brains of the staff would be the deciding issue, but I am not such a pessimist as he; I still hope for a favourable issue. The man who is going to win the war is the poor old lance-corporal of the unpaid variety. General A wants something done. He acquaints Colonel B of his wishes. Colonel B notifies Captain C, who, in his turn, passes on the good news to Second-lieutenant D, who skilfully shifts the burden to Sergeant E. Sergeant E, intent on obtaining a disproportionately large issue of rum for his platoon and himself, details Lance-corporal (unpaid) F. Lance-corporal (unpaid) F takes six men, three shovels, a pick, and a tin of chloride of lime, and the job gets done. Then he returns and reports the completion of the job to Sergeant E. Sergeant E steps up to Second-lieutenant D, salutes, and reports, 'I've done that job, sir.' 'I,' mark you; no mention of Lance-corporal (unpaid) F, with his six men, three shovels, pick, and tin of chloride of lime. Second-lieutenant D wires to Captain C, 'Have done job.' Captain C sends a message by orderly to the effect that he—'he,' mark you—has completed the allotted task. Colonel B takes pen in hand and writes: 'Ref. your, B.M. 3427, I beg to report that this work has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion by me.' Still no word of Lance-corporal (unpaid) F. General A, replete with a good dinner, murmurs, 'Good fellow that, Colonel B.' In due course Colonel B becomes Colonel B., C.M.G. Lance-corporal (unpaid) F remains Lance-corporal (unpaid) F until a kindly shell carries his head away." (The Bodley Head: Dymock's.)

AUSTRALASIAN VERSE.

It is possible to concede most of the claims which an enthusiastic preface makes on behalf of "A Venture in Verse," by Miss Marjorie Nicholls. Miss Nicholls, who is a New Zealander, has a good ear, a sense of form, and a quick play of fancy—qualities which are seen to advantage in her work. It is true that here and there are signs of immaturity. For instance, the author is too fond of achieving technical correctness by the introduction of unnecessary locutions. Apart from this, Miss Nicholls has attained no small measure of success in a volume whose verses are pleasant rather than distinguished. We quote "Joan of Arc" as an example of her verse:—

Fair as the lilies on your banner bordered,
Sweet as their namesakes growing 'mid the grass;
Bright as the sword miraculously given,
And never dimming though the ages pass—
Such be the fame of you—
Dear be the name of you—
Joan, little daughter of God.

Fair are the churches built your name to honour;
Sweet are the prayers that thence to heaven fly;
Bright are the windows pictured with your story,
And never dimming, though the years sweep by—
Such is the fame of you—
Cherished the name of you—
Joan, little daughter of God.

NEW NOVELS.

In a careless moment Sir Rider Haggard once permitted Alan Quartermain to die. But that stalwart, like some other worthies of fiction, is made of too solid metal to allow such a misadventure to interfere with his career. Never have his qualities had such scope as in "Finished," never has his knowledge of white and black stood him in better stead. Seldom, indeed, has Sir Rider Haggard spun a better yarn. As a rule, the author touches upon history only in so far as it is required to explain his stories of Africa, but this book has an immediate historical background. It describes the decline and fall of the Zulu Empire, which proved itself one of the bravest adversaries that Britain ever fought in the "little" wars of last century. The Zulu had no grudge against the British; they liked them, indeed, though they could not understand their scruples. Cetewayo, who is the real hero of the story, was ready to wipe the Boers off the face of the earth when the British took the Boers under their protection by the formula of annexation. The simple Zulu could not grasp the situation. He knew that in 1877 and for long afterwards there was no love lost between Briton and Boer, so why this tenderness? He knew that since Shepstone had formally annexed the Boer Republic the out-dwellers of the Transvaal had harried him and sheltered themselves under the British flag. So in his bewilderment Cetewayo summoned his impis and fought the British. There was a bloody sequel in Rorke's Drift and Isandula, but it was the last effort of the Zulus, a fine race and clean fighters by their standards. They were "finished" as a predatory nation of warriors; the sub-continent no longer feared their terrible disciplined onslaughts. Sir Rider Haggard's book has something of the epic quality in its account of the dying fortunes of this race. It has, besides all the embellishments of fiction. The Zulu war is the background for a stirring drama, in which heroes, villains, and agreeable damsels (whose hearts are whiter than their skins) play appropriate parts. Through all flits the figure of Allan Quatermain, somewhat increased in years, but still a person of infinite resource and capacity. (Ward Lock).

In "The House in Marylebone," Mrs. W. K. Clifford writes of a type that becomes increasingly common. Not so many years ago, when a girl wanted from choice or necessity to earn her own living, there was little alternative for her but to swell the glutted market of governesses and companions on a starvation wage. But now she becomes a "business girl," a typist, a secretary, a nurse, a worker in one or other of the hundred new avenues of employment now open to women. She is independent economically and domestically; she lives in her own "digs," perhaps with two or three girls like herself; she prides herself on being practical and self-sufficient, just as her mid-Victorian sister thought it the right thing to be helpless. She may marry sooner or later, but, as a rule, is in no hurry to do so. Her relations with men are cordial but not effusive, and utterly free from sentimentality. She enjoys man's society well enough, but values her own independence too highly to run the risk of making a bad bargain on impulse. Such are the denizens of "The House in Marylebone." They are all highly efficient and competent; they can look after themselves very well indeed, and with the freemasonry of womanhood can also find time to look after the girl who does not possess their own robust self-confidence. At first it may strike the more male reader that the triple-armed assurance with which they face the world has made them a trifle hard, but he will find that beneath the surface is a wealth of tenderness, which awaits only the right touch to be released. Mrs. Clifford has written an agreeable book, which describes the lives of Julia Radford and her Marylebone friends with sympathy and humour. (Duckworth: Angus and Robertson.)

POLICE AND FIREMEN'S CARNIVAL

The organisation of the Police and Firemen's Carnival, which is held annually in aid of the hospitals of the State, is now proceeding. Inspector Wallace, Sergt. Baker, Constable Scott, and Station-officers Riddell and Creek, assisted by other members of both services, are making special efforts to raise as large a sum as possible this year. The art unions which are being promoted will serve for the whole of New South Wales, and the proceeds of the sales of tickets in each centre will be disbursed among the hospitals in that district. The usual sports meeting will be held at the Showground on March 2.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

In view of the forthcoming production of "The Willow Tree," it may be noted that very few plays have dealt with Japan and its legends, local record suggesting only the titles of "The Darling of the Gods," and, both in operatic and dramatic form, "Madame Butterfly." In London Miss Loie Fuller once staged several Japanese dramas by Otojiro Kawa Kami, and Sado Yacco. "The Moonlight Blossom," by Chester Fernald, once had a run at the Prince of Wales Theatre with Kyrle Bellew and Mrs. Brown Potter in the cast, and the late Lawrence Irving produced "The Typhoon" in 1913; but, generally, it may be said that Japanese character had not often been illustrated on the London stage until the recent production of "The Willow Tree." This New York success will be performed for the first time in Australia at the Criterion Theatre on Saturday, January 26, when Kathlene Macdonell and Charles Waldron, after their six-night revival of "Outcast," will appear in the poetic love-legend of the statue of the princess endowed with life, and of her voluntary transformation into a willow-tree when she perceives that she is in the way of her English lover and the sweetheart newly arrived from his own country. This is one of the new pieces recommended by Mr. George Barnum to the J. C. Williamson direction as the outcome of his toils and travels in the United States during the last nine months of 1917. This American producer, who first came here three years ago for a long stay to stage pieces for the Muriel Starr-Millward combination, and other companies, is now busily rehearsing the new play. He describes it as placed entirely in a Japanese atmosphere, and imbued with a legendary romance which lifts it out of the work-a-day world into a charmful, tender, and poetic sphere. "I saw 'The Willow Tree,'" he continued, "at the Cohan and Harris Theatre (N.Y.), and also at Philadelphia; and on my way back to Sydney, at Chicago. The central characters were first created by Fay Baker, an actress who has lately come to the front, and Shelley Hull, a well-known artist. During my journeyings to Cincinnati and other great cities, I saw Grant Mitchell, a clever light comedian, in a new piece at Boston, entitled 'The Tailor-made Man.' I admired the piece extremely, and Mr. Hugh Ward ultimately secured it for Australia. The story showed how a young assistant in a tailor's shop, conscious of the unusual talents and personality with which he was endowed, 'annexed' temporarily a millionaire's dress suit, assumed the owner's name, attended a great social reception, was appointed director of a steamship company, showed organising power which revolutionised its prospects, and then—was found out! All ended happily. I also helped to secure Bayard Veiller's 'The Thirteenth Chair;' 'The Man Who Came Back,' a drama illustrating the retrieval of a nearly ruined life through determination and a woman's love; and 'May Time,' a charming comedy with music. This was at the Booth Theatre drawing crowds, and will be reserved for one of the J. C. Williamson comic opera combinations. In Chicago I saw an amazingly funny farce, 'Parlour, Bedroom, and Bath,' also on its way here, as well as a score more pieces, ranging from poor to pretty good, which, however, I definitely turned down."

The musical season of 1918 will open early with the Saturday Popular Concerts, which offer more to the public than any similar entertainment hitherto promoted in Sydney. This is a formidable statement to make, but it is well founded on the fact that both a chorus and a string orchestra will assist. Moreover these elements will be supplied by the Royal Philharmonic Society of Sydney, under Mr. Joseph Bradley's direction. Four of these concerts will be given at the Town Hall, on February 2, 9, 16, and 23. New ground will be opened at each by dividing the series into operatic gems, favourite numbers from the oratorios, and miscellaneous programmes. There are several new features in the scheme as arranged by an experienced committee, with Mr. H. R. Marriner as hon. secretary. There will be, for example, no reserve of seats in advance. The galleries, which properly speaking should be termed "balconies," will be available at two shillings, and the ground floor, seating about two thousand people, at one shilling, thus placing the public on the same footing as Philharmonic subscribers, many of whom are sure to attend. Furthermore, there will be no encores permitted, in order that the whole programme may be enjoyed with a reliable breaking-up at ten o'clock. It is believed that this new rule will especially meet the wishes of suburban patrons. Favourite soloists will be engaged for each concert, but undoubtedly the central attraction will be the highly-trained Philharmonic choir. This great body of voices is capable of rendering an immense repertoire. They are just now running through "Hail, Bright Abode," the sailors' chorus from "The Flying Dutchman," Rossini's "Inflammatus," Elgar's patriotic "Britons Alert," the charmful semi-chorus for Philistian maidens, "Fair Spring" (Saint-Saens "Samson and Delilah"), "God Sent His Messenger the Rain" (Sullivan's "The Golden Legend"), and a score of other beautiful ensembles. In times past the best remembered popular concerts have been by Hazon's orchestra at Her Majesty's, the Newbury-Spada at the Town Hall, and those managed by the late W. J. Turner. Mr. Turner brought over a party from Melbourne in January, 1892, which embraced the then unknown singers Lalla Miranda and Ada Crossley, both of whom suddenly rose to fame. No encores was the iron-bound rule. One night, however, the house rose sensationally at the willowy, girlish Lalla Miranda (who afterwards sang Gilda and other soprano roles season after season in Royal Italian opera, Covent Garden), and called her back seven or eight times. Twenty precious minutes were wasted, but at last the rule was relaxed, and the debutante sang again.

Miss Margaret Linden, a Melbourne actress of distinguished appearance, who played many secondary roles here during a career of seven years, left for America four months ago, and now sends news of her doings. It seems that she left intending to make straight for Los Angeles, the great film-making centre, but in San Francisco was helpfully advised by Mr. Meyerfeld, vice-president of the Orpheum Circuit, to present her letters of introduction in New York first. From there she might be sent on tour to the Coast, and in that case would start at a higher salary than by opening there first. Acting upon this instruction, the new arrival found a great deal going on in New York, and had three pretty good offers, including lead in "Cheating Cheaters," with A. H. Woods on the one-night stands, whilst waiting her chances. Ultimately she signed a contract with Henry Miller for "Anthony in Wonderland," visiting Baltimore and Washington before the New York season. Her part was bright, and of some importance, and beautifully gowned by the management, and carried with it an excellent salary. Mr. Miller, who has been an actor-manager of the first importance for 20 years past, engaged Miss Linden after less than half-an-hour's chat on her looks and manners as eminently suited for the role; and if all went well she expected to be included in the company that was to open his new 43rd Street Theatre, New York, about Christmas. Miss Linden stated that Irby Marshall and Leonard Willey (both of this city) had been engaged by John Drew for "The Gay Lord Quex." This is confirmed by the latest New York exchanges, which show that Miss Marshall was appearing at the 48th Street Theatre from November 13 in the important secondary role of the Duchess of Stroud to the Sophia Fulgarney of Margaret Illington, and the "Gay Lord Quex" of John Drew. Mr. Willey was cast as Captain Bastlin.

In addition to the new pieces mentioned by Mr. George Barnum, the J. C. Williamson management quote the following as likely to be included amongst their attractions for 1918:—Dramas: "The Silent Witness," "The Easiest Way," "A Scrap of Paper," "General Post," "The Heart of Wetona." Comedies: "Business Before Pleasure," "The Cinderella Man," "Captain Kidd Junr.," "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," "Johnny Get Your Gun," and "Nothing But the Truth." Musical plays include "The Maid of the Mountains," "Maytime," "The Aviator," "Oh, Boy," "Oh, Oh, Delphine," and "What Next?"

He gave her one look and it frightened her, though she allowed nothing of it to be seen. But she thought the time had come to play a very daring card.

"Since you have admitted me to your jealously guarded domains and are entertaining me so hospitably, Lord Llandrylas," she said, "I think you might be frank with me."

"I was frank with you," he said in a low voice, "I was frank with you on the moors, and I saw by your eyes that you understood me."

"But you told me just now you had no commerce with the outside world. And yet you are interested in papier mache, Lord Llandrylas."

There was a sharp hissing intake of the man's breath. His black eyes dilated.

"What do you mean?" he gasped.

"You told me in your Druid song that I was one who came through the mists. Let us assume then that I have strange powers. Let us assume then that I can see into the recesses of your heart, Lord Llandrylas. I will tell you some pictures that I can see floating all around you in the air."

She bent forward, her left hand was on the table, the other raised a little as she pointed over his shoulder. She was acting, and she knew it, but there was a sense of half reality about it also. She threw herself into the part of seer, and her voice vibrated strangely.

"I see a ship coming by night to a great city. It comes not once but many times, and what it carries is secret. I see a great genius in that city working for you at your command. I see another city brighter and fairer than the first. It is a foreign city, with gay boulevards and cafes, and from that city there comes another man, who is a genius also. He is a little, merry man, but there is a great brain hidden away beneath the commonplace exterior. I see——"

She stopped herself just in time, she was about to refer to the murder of Peter Fanshawe, when in one swift moment she realised that this might defeat her whole object. She wanted to frighten her captor. She pretended to far more knowledge than she really had. If he thought that his plans, whatever they were, were discovered and known to others, then they would become useless.

There was a considerable silence. From time to time it was broken by curious little snapping noises like electric sparks—she heard them quite distinctly. At last she looked up.

If a living face can suddenly freeze into marble, with only the eyes malevolent and blazing with black light, then indeed Violet saw such a face then. The man opposite her seemed turned into a statue. There was not slightest motion of him—only the black fire from his eyes. She seemed to be confronted by something horribly evil, and all the courage of a pure heart and undaunted will rose up to meet it.

She was holding a spoon in her hand—the spoon with which she had been taking her soup. It was a spoon of solid gold. Though she had not noticed it. She rapped with it upon the table.

"Sir," she said, "have I brought you to your bearings now? You met a quiet lady walking about the moors, and you brought her here into your fantastic mad-house. You did not think she knew all your secret activities. You know it now!" Each staccato sentence was emphasised by a tap of the spoon on the table.

The man opposite remained a statue. Violet went on.

"In a few hours, Lord Llandrylas, your castle will be assailed. You will have to open your gates to those who will come for me. Do you think because you have forced me here, my friends know nothing of where I am? Your tools who ran the ship from Pendrylas to Liverpool and from Liverpool to Pendrylas, and brought those huge cases from the Milton Paper Works, have not been silent. Lord Llandrylas, you are in a bad way."

The immense crimson fire roared and glowed upon the hearth. The electric lights depending from the roof of this rich place threw their yellow glory upon fifty thousand pounds' worth of gold plate and antiquities more valuable than that. The man in the black clothes with the marble face, confronted the young, vivid, and accusing girl.

Violet was now sure she had won.

"Yes," she said. "The whole world will soon know what you have been doing in Liverpool. And did you not condescend some time ago even to honouring Manchester with your presence? The unseen powers told me that you—the chieftain of the mountains—were walking through the Palm Court of the Midland Hotel with your bought genius. Now, Lord Llandrylas."

Suddenly, with the snap of an electric switch turned off, the whole great hall seemed to fade into dimness. The mist of the mountains seemed pressing through the walls. There was a deep throbbing sound as if the bass string of a harp were being plucked.

Violet lifted her glass, and drank a little wine. Her hand was trembling. She looked round her—to the physical eye the hall was just the same, rich and splendid beyond imagining. But she knew in her heart that she had gone too far.

She had awakened something beyond her control. She thought she had won. It was not so. She had been playing with unknown forces, and the chill of a dreadful revelation began to steal over her.

He had seemed sane enough, a strange and compelling personality, but one upon which she could play. Now!

Lord Llandrylas rose slowly from his seat. The motion was curiously serpentine. He became elongated, growing taller and taller—it was thus he had seemed upon the moor.

That in itself was horrible, but what ensued was more horrible still. His face began to change—it changed utterly.

Up till now, he had been a splendid and courteous gentleman, a little irritated at first, angry towards the end. But he was still Lord Llandrylas.

The light on his face went out. Another light took its place. For some reason or other, Violet thought of green fire—she even raised her head and glanced round the hanging illuminations of the roof. No, there were no green rays falling from them.

She heard a hollow echo. It was the echo of a word, and the word was "Liverpool."

The name of the city was hissed out with hideous malignancy. The man's face writhed, the terrible eyes blazed with maniacal fire, the lips curled away and showed the teeth. "Liverpool."

Violet knew what she had done. Lord Llandrylas, as she had suspected, was a hopeless madman, but his madness was at times in abeyance. She had called up the evil spirit which possessed him, and which even now, was shaking the very tenement of the body as if it would burst its bonds in a paroxysm of hate. He rushed round the table to her side, and caught her by the wrist. His touch was like flame, his grip like steel.

"Come," he cried. "Witch, or Devil, or Queen, or whatever you are. You know much. You shall know all. I will show you that proud city."

He dragged her across the hall, and a chair fell behind them with a crash. She could not choose but go. Resistance was utterly hopeless. She ran along with him, feeling as if she were going to her death. He flung open the door and tore through it into a vaulted corridor. Then he laughed, the horrible laughter of a maniac.

"Come, come. Quick, quicker."

Suddenly, he released her wrist, but she fled along with him nevertheless, as if caught up in a whirlwind.

"I am mad, too," she thought. "This is the end of everything, but at least I am going to know the truth."

At the end of the corridor there was a door. The Earl took a key from his pocket. His hand trembled violently, and when at last he inserted it into the lock, it was with a savage snarl. A twisting stairway of stone was revealed, lit by electricity. The walls were of immense masses of hewn stone, the narrow spiral stairs worn by the feet of thousands of people.

"Come!" he cried again, and leapt upwards.

On and on they hurried, higher, higher, and through the narrow slits in the eight foot depth of the wall—slits made for archers in the old days—the cool night air came flowing. On and on, until at last a little railed platform, another door studded with nails, and then they were out upon the highest platform of Castle Ynad's central tower—three hundred feet up in the air.

The mist had all gone. The black vault of heaven was spangled with stars. The moon was just setting over the sea—a red menacing moon, which made a long path as of blood upon the waters, far, far below.

All around, the mountain peaks stood sentinel. The scene was inexpressibly solemn and grand.

Lord Llandrylas leant against the battlements, gasping for breath, and staring down at the castle buildings—acres of roofs, walls, and tower tops—a dreadful spectre of the night.

"Eight hundred years ago," he said, "my ancestor, King Hywel, king of this country, —as I am rightful king of it to-day—was harried in this castle by the knights of the English king, John. It was in the year 1207, and the king had granted a charter for the first time to the city of Liverpool. These barons burnt a great part of Castle Ynad, and slew my ancestor, whose son swore to be revenged."

A.M.P. SOCIETY.

AMENDMENTS OF BYLAWS.

A special meeting of members of the Australian Mutual Provident Society was held in the society's head office, Pitt-street, yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering proposed amendments of the bylaws. The chairman of the board of directors (Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C.) presided, others present including Colonel Sir James Burns, M.L.C., and Messrs. R. J. Black, M.L.C., J. T. Walker, R. Teece, Consett Stephen, H. W. Apperly (general manager), C. A. Elliott (actuary), R. Thodey (manager of the industrial department), A. C. Hollingworth (assistant secretary), and A. Duckworth (chief accountant).

The chairman said that the directors, in considering three or four important alterations, had decided to go over the whole of the bylaws and bring them up to date. Some of the bylaws as they stood were not very clearly expressed.

The principal matters dealt with were the subject of the following memorandum by the board of directors:—

1. Limit of risk.—The present limit of £10,000 on any one life was authorised in 1887—thirty years ago—when the society's funds were only £7,500,000. They are now over £37,000,000, and an increase to £25,000 is considered to be fully warranted. Since the bylaw authorising the society to reassure risks in excess of its limit was passed in 1910 a total of £640,000 of assurances has been placed with other offices, and there has not been one claim made in respect of same, so that a large amount of good business has been given away which could with advantage have been retained by the society if its limit had been higher.

2. Contribution to Officers' Provident Fund.—In July, 1912, the members authorised a yearly contribution of £2500 to be made by the society of the Officers' Provident Fund. The present proposal is for a yearly contribution not exceeding 5 per cent. on the amount expendid by the society in the previous year for salaries. This will be in lieu of the present contribution of £2500 per annum, and if authorised will probably obviate the necessity for any further appeal to the members in the future.

3. Voting for directors.—The society has not for some years been put to the trouble and expense which an election under the present system would entail. That system was introduced in 1883, when there were only 50,000 policies on the books. Now there are over 325,000 (excluding industrial policies), and the issue of say 250,000 voting papers would mean a large amount of work, besides great expense for stationery and postage. Experience showed, too, that only a very small proportion of the voting papers issued was actually used. The plan now proposed is a combination of personal voting with the voting paper system, and in the directors' view will be much more convenient and easily handled. Any member who wishes to vote and cannot attend in person at the office where his policy is registered can send for a voting paper and regard his vote by returning the completed paper through the post.

Other proposed amendments.—As several of the old bylaws are badly worded, and in some cases obscure in meaning, the board decided to take the opportunity of having the whole of them revised by counsel, and the result is seen in the numerous alterations, additions, omissions, and re-draftings.

The whole of the amendments recommended by the board, and including those referred to below, were, with two slight alterations, agreed to.

On the amendment to bylaw 8, providing, on the question of limitation of risk, that no greater sum than £25,000, exclusive of bonus additions, should at one time stand at the society's own risk on any one life, instead of £10,000 as now provided, the chairman said this question had been before the board for some years. They now sought power to undertake the higher risk, i.e., to go to £25,000.

An amendment that the amount should not be increased in the case of policies issued outside Australasia was not seconded.

Bylaw 24, setting out that no pension or gratuity to a retiring officer should be allowed without the consent of a special general meeting, was amended to provide that the board should pay annually to the A.M.P. Society's officers' provident fund a sum not exceeding 5 per cent. of the amount expended in the preceding year by the society for salaries, such payment to be in lieu of the yearly payment to such fund of £2500 authorised by special resolution on July 26, 1912. The chairman said it was found that, compared with banks and other institutions, the society in this matter was not treating its officers as well as it should like to.

The bylaw in respect to the election of directors was amended to provide that any member might vote personally by ballot at the office on the register of which the policy entitling him to vote was entered, or might record his vote by forwarding to such office signed voting paper, the reason for the alteration being set out in the board's memorandum.

A further amendment for the retention of the present system was not seconded.

NEWCASTLE'S FUTURE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

"Don't feel disappointed about the war," said Mr. A. Goninan to-night at a dinner and welcome home tendered to him at Wickham Council-chambers. The Mayor of Wickham (Ald. R. J. Bond), presided.

Continuing, Mr. Goninan said that all the big men he met in the old country and the humblest workers had declared they were going to see the war through. He considered Newcastle was the only town of any importance in Australia that was fit to become a great industrial and manufacturing centre. There was an abundance of coal, but that was not all that was required. He blamed the chambers of commerce, mayors, and aldermen for not doing more to assist the men who wanted to come to a district like this. If a man wanted to start an industry to-day and use electric current he had to pay a penny-halfpenny per kilowatt for the current, and had to establish his own power plant. The industry which he and others had proposed to start would cost them £60,000 for the power alone. He advocated the establishment of big central stations with which they could cut the cost of power from one penny-halfpenny to 0.4 or 0.5 of a penny per kilowatt. The steel works would draw a large number of allied industries provided they could get cheap land and cheap power. American and English manufacturers had asked him about this great district, and how the steel works were progressing, and what were the prospects. The aluminium and carbide industries had gone to Tasmania, because they had hydraulic electric power there. It was much cheaper than anything in this district. It was time that political wrangling was stopped and we got down to business and did something that would be of benefit to the people, and induce manufacturers to come here. When we considered that we had a paltry five million population, and compared ourselves with America, which had now reached a population of over 100,000,000 in a comparatively short space of time, what were our prospects? America had grown through home consumption and a prohibitive tariff, and she could now compete with and export all over the world. What was to stop Australia from becoming a great industrial centre, provided we had the population? He believed that there was no place in Australia equal to Newcastle for establishing an industry. America was contemplating getting two million Chinese to cultivate the soil and undertake a lot of work to free men to take on shipbuilding and other industries which were lacking in man-power, so as to give Great Britain the amount of shipping she required. The only great difficulty before us was shipping.

BETTING PROSECUTION.

"A TECHNICAL BREACH."

William James Cupitt (50), a tobacconist, was charged at the Central Police Court yesterday with having, on December 11, used a room in a building in George-street West for purposes of betting.

Mr. Bathgate (Crown Law Department) appeared for the prosecution; Mr. E. R. Abigail for Cupitt, who pleaded not guilty.

Defendant said he did not conduct what was known as a betting shop. Occasionally he took out to the racecourse money which he received from friends who wanted to bet on a race.

The magistrate, Mr. Clarke, S.M., said that while there was nothing in the evidence to show that betting was carried on systematically by the defendant, a technical breach of the law had been made out. In the circumstances the penalty would be as light as the Court could make it. Defendant would have to pay a fine of £10, in default one month's imprisonment, with hard labour.

In reply to Mr. Abigail, who intimated that there would be an appeal against the conviction, the magistrate said that he considered it an offence under the Act to receive money for betting purposes.

ILLEGAL SALE OF LIQUOR.

Before Mr. Clarke, S.M., at the Central Police Court yesterday, Thomas Carroll was proceeded against for selling liquor without a license at a house in Abercrombie-street on the 4th inst.

Mr. D. Levy appeared for Carroll, who pleaded not guilty.

The magistrate convicted. He said that as this was Carroll's third conviction for the same offence he could not let him off lightly. Besides being fined £100, in default nine months' hard labour, Carroll would have to serve a sentence of three months' imprisonment with hard labour.

A LEGISLATOR FINED.

At the Central Police Court yesterday James Wilson, a member of the Legislative Council, was convicted and fined by Mr. M'Kensey, S.M.

Described as an agent, and giving his age as 54, defendant was charged with having been drunk in King-street, near Macquarie-street, on Monday last. He was also charged with having used insulting words to a constable in the charge-room of the Central Police Court.

A remand was granted on Tuesday after evidence had been given by G. H. Danbienberg, a returned soldier, Frederick Ward, a cab proprietor, Police-sergeant Winter, and Constable Bowman.

Defendant stated yesterday that he had no knowledge of how he fell in the street or how he was taken to the Central Police Station. As he had had only two or three drinks on Monday night the condition in which he was found might have been the result of a fit. He had no recollection of having used bad language. If he had said anything offensive to any member of the police force he was sorry for it, as the police at all times had treated him with courtesy. There was no ground for his statement while excited that he had been struck by the constable who took him to the Central Police Station in a cab.

With the remark that he regretted to see "a public man in such a position" the magistrate imposed a fine of 10s, in default two days' imprisonment, for drunkenness; and 10s, with £2 witnesses' expenses, in default five days' imprisonment, for the insulting language.

THE CENSORSHIP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Senator Pearce has taken the occasion of replying to my letter on the censorship. I confess that a great number of people, in this State at any rate, were under the impression that the censorship was in the hands of Mr. Hughes, and not of Senator Pearce. It comes as a surprise to me to find Senator Pearce replying to criticisms of the censorship. However, that is of little moment. But this fact may be noted, that on at least two occasions representations were made in Sydney to Mr. Hughes by important political and journalistic interests upon the censorship, and Mr. Hughes, without any reference to Senator Pearce, gave certain assurances. Some of these assurances were acted upon, others were not.

Now to take Senator Pearce's defence of the censorship. Let me say at once that I have just as high a respect for the gentlemen who are performing the onerous duties of censors as Senator Pearce has. I expressed that opinion in my letter; and I may add that I believe if the censorship were not perverted to party political ends no one could possibly object to it.

Senator Pearce denies that the war news which comes from Britain is recensored in Australia. His phrase is that my statement to this effect "is absolutely false." I reply that it is absolutely true.

Senator Pearce says that the news of the sinking of the Southland was withheld for some weeks under orders of the British Admiralty. That I deny; and in support of my denial I will make a suggestion at the close of this letter. But if the news was withheld or censored under the instructions of the British Admiralty, why then were those instructions not observed by the censors. Why, the very dogs in the street barked the loss of the Southland. Therefore, any military precaution in the censoring was rendered futile. The truth was exaggerated by rumour, and harm was done. In regard to that, will Senator Pearce explain the mysterious doings of the censors in regard to the Cumberland?

With regard to what Senator Pearce says, that the censors denied charges of incompetency in administration, I may say that owing to my fault the charge of suppression was wrongly published in an indictment of the censorship; but no one could mistake my meaning with regard to the things which occurred in the Liverpool Camp. Mr. Orchard made his charges. They were flatly denied. Unless I am very much mistaken Mr. Orchard was subjected to a considerable amount of hectoring in the matter of his statements as to the treatment of the recruits in the Liverpool Camp. The unfair censorship there was in the suppression of the facts by the Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, in his refusal for months to hold an inquiry, and in his truculent denial of Mr. Orchard's statements. My remarks in that connection were also directed to the fact that for many months after the finding of Mr. Justice Rich on the villainies of the Liverpool Camp Senator Pearce took no action.

Will Senator Pearce now declare that reports of anti-conscription speeches were not censored in the newspaper offices? For example, was anything done in respect to Mr. Tudor's and Mr. Ryan's speeches in Sydney at the opening of the campaign?

After the campaign at the last referendum had been in full swing for about a fortnight, the censor published a letter giving the text of his new instructions, and this declared that all previous instructions were cancelled. Now I challenge Senator Pearce to make public what those previous instructions were. I do not know what they were, but I know some of the things done under them. I know that the action of the censorship under them provoked such a storm among newspaper editors that they had to be, and were, modified.

I do not know more than the man in the street, but is it a fact that cable information on important subjects has been held up? For example, is it a fact that the results of the Canadian elections were withheld from publication by the censor, that information with regard to loans in London was held back? These are only trifling matters, but the great question itself is of the highest importance. That the censorship should be used for war purposes is right and proper, and no one will gainsay it, so far as legitimate war purposes are concerned; that is, preventing the enemy receiving information of benefit to him and detriment to us, and preventing matter to be published which would injure recruiting and the conduct of the war. But the suspicion is abroad that the censorship was used for party political purposes, and this suspicion will not be allayed until an inquiry is held.

I put two questions to Senator Pearce:—

(1) Will he allow the Press freely to discuss the censorship, and to publish the facts, maintaining silence only upon the facts which might assist the enemy or injure our Allies?

(2) Will the Commonwealth Government undertake to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into the whole matter, and relieve the public mind by giving an authentic pronouncement upon the methods of the censorship in the past and the conduct of the censorship in the future?

The British nation was not afraid to have an inquiry into two great military bungles from which the Empire suffered, viz., Gallipoli and Mesopotamia, and were not afraid to publish the results. An allegation of bungling in the Australian censorship is surely a minor matter compared with the allegations of bungling in face of the enemy. But it affects our liberties as a democracy. Therefore I submit there is no reason why such an inquiry should not be held. Mere denials from Senator Pearce are of no avail when the public believe (and I know) that his denials are worthless.

I am, etc.,
JOHN D. FITZGERALD.

It should be noted that taxpayers who neglect their obligation to furnish returns are liable to a maximum penalty of £100, and no taxpayer will be relieved from liability to such penalty by reason only that a notice to furnish the return may not have been received by him, or that the prescribed form may not have been delivered to him.

All owners of taxable lands in the Western Division of New South Wales subject to mortgage should furnish particulars of every such mortgage, in order that they may derive the benefit of any deduction to which they may be entitled in respect of the interest on the mortgage of their lands, including improvements thereon.

BIRDS IN THE ORCHARD.

(BY W. M. SHERRIE.)

The resolution agreed to at the recent Fruitgrowers' Conference, "that the Government be requested to take steps to protect native birds," has a double significance. In the first place, it indicates that the fruitgrowers as a whole are beginning to realise the importance of bird life to their industry, and in the second it may be reasonably interpreted as a reflection upon the Government for having failed to move effectively in this matter before. It is one thing to place a law on the statute book; it is another to make that law operative in such a manner as to achieve the purpose aimed at. Up to the present time this has not been done. The bird protection laws which have been in existence in this State for some years might serve the purpose for which they were framed if only there were properly-constituted officials to see that they were consistently enforced. Unless it is the specific duty of some one to attend to the enforcement of a bird-protection law then it might just as well be non-existent.

One of the delegates at the conference referred to the good work done in the orchard by such birds as the grey thrush, the so-called woodpecker (which is a tree-creeper, there being no woodpeckers in Australia), and the yellow-breasted robin. Credit was also given to the little silver-eye and the yellow-rumped tit as friends of the orchardist. All of these do good work, of course, but there are scores of other birds which should be equally welcome on the farms of the fruitgrower. About the coastal districts one of the most valuable friends of the fruitgrower is the brown flycatcher (popularly known as jacky winter). This almost domesticated little bird is an insect-eater pure and simple. If you go through the citrus orchards in the County of Cumberland, or other localities adjacent to the coast, you cannot fail to note the numbers of these birds which operate constantly about the trees, and even in the homestead gardens. When the brown flycatcher (which is badly named, since the bird is really grey and white) is not actively engaged in capturing insects on the fruit trees, it will be found sitting on a post or rail, waiting for the opportunity to take its prey on the wing. From dawn to dusk this melodious ally of the producer works at its self-appointed task of killing flies and other insects, and it takes no wages at all in the form of stolen fruit.

There are other birds which do, but even so they must surely give a good return in the form of destroyed insect pests. Other birds which are common enough in the coastal fruit-growing regions are the whistlers. These delightful songsters live almost entirely on insects, including caterpillars; yet they do not appear to vary their diet with fruit even when it is obtainable without trouble. In the Hornsby district, and right away along the coast, one commonly sees flocks of finches in the orchards. These birds are seed-eaters, however, and they attack neither fruit nor insects. They render some service, though, in keeping in check the growth of weeds. As a rule the starling is not welcome in the orchard, and yet even this imported bird probably does more good there than harm. The starling is very fond of figs and other soft fruits, but it also plays havoc with the bot and other flies which are a pest of the stockowner.

Not a few of the numerous honey-eater tribe also balance the mischief they do among fruit by the quantities of insects they eat. The clarion-throated grey thrush is always a valuable forager in an orchard, and so also is the reed warbler and the blue wren. Several of the birds mentioned render double service to the orchardist and his family, since they prey on the pests of his industry and at the same time supply free and matchless music at all hours of the day, but more especially in the morning. Among the birds which do this may be mentioned the grey thrush, the mountain thrush, the yellow-rumped tit, the reed warbler, and the brown flycatcher, to say nothing of the whistlers, whose powers of melody easily surpass those of any other species of the same size to be found in Australia.

A cheery companion to the orchard worker indeed is the grey thrush, with his ringing note and his fearlessness in making himself perfectly at home in close relationship with both the homestead and those about it. One of the most pleasing features of bird life is the manner in which various species will respond to proper treatment. Birds like the silver-eyes, the blue wren, the brown flycatcher, the thrush, the noisy minah, the finches, and the black and white flycatchers become almost domesticated in their habits when they find that they are not molested. With a little encouragement they will take up their quarters permanently in or about the orchards and nest there. In the case of the migrants, they will return the following season to the same locality. One of the migratory forms which on occasions will do a great deal of damage among fruit—but more particularly cherries—is the wood swallow, commonly known as the summer bird. But for the most part the wood swallows like the spacious regions of the interior, where they consume enormous quantities of insects on farm and station and in the open bush.

THE WOOL TRADE.

APPRAISEMENTS IN FULL SWING

Appraisements for the current season are now in full swing, and arrangements have been made for seven series in the Sydney market, terminating on March 25 next, when, if no obstructing conditions obtrude, 385,000 bales will be appraised. A commencement on this quantity was made on Monday last, when the fifth series opened. The limit for each series is 55,000 bales. The roster provides for four series, without any break, up to February 13; but an adjournment will take place from that date, to admit of the third series in Brisbane commencing on February 18. After that fixture in the northern centre, the ninth series in Sydney will open on February 25 and conclude on March 5; the two following series proceeding without interruption if possible, and concluding on March 25. Prior to the holiday adjournment about 189,000 bales were appraised, and the prospects are now for the aggregate to reach 574,000 bales by the end of March.

The catalogues submitted this week were representative of a wide area of the State, chiefly the west, north-west, and Riverina, with a few lines from the tablelands; the bulk comprised useful, combing wools in the grease, with some attractive parcels of scoured. Many of the wools were in attractive condition, and showed very fine quality, but lacked length of staple compared to last season. A rather large proportion in some catalogues carried a fair quantity of burr and seed. Riverina wools were in very nice order, being more free and better grown than for several seasons past. North-western wools, while carrying less burr than last season, were generally rather short in staple. The promise is now for the proportion of good to super wools to increase in the catalogues. Prices of various qualities among the important brands appraised this week are the following:—

PENALTY OF LIGHT-WEIGHT BALES.

Among the consignments received of late are a considerable number of what were deemed bales of wool prior to the new regulations; but are now reduced to butts or bags, according to the weight of the package. The central wool committee has decided that "irregular packages include butts, fadges, sacks, and bales weighing under 225lb gross greasy, and 150lb gross scoured." Which means that although the wool is in a woolpack, and apparently in shipping order, it must come up to the required weights to be classed as a bale. All packages below the weight are treated as butts, bags, or fadges; and catalogued separately from the main part of the clip. This involves additional labour in handling and appraising the wool, as well as reducing returns to growers by the repacking costs.

LAST BRISBANE SERIES.

The wools catalogued at the second series of appraisements in Brisbane were representative of most of the principal districts in the northern State. Ten catalogues, totalling 40,310 bales, were submitted from December 31 to January 4, and proceeds from the appraisements will be due on Friday next. Generally the wools were brighter, better grown, and carried considerably less vegetable matter than at the first series. In many instances the wool was rather heavy in condition. The central district showed to advantage; the wools being well grown, free, and in fair condition. There was a good length of staple, owing, in many instances, to a delay in shearing through the recent industrial trouble. Wools from the northern district included less scoured than usual; many clips again showed fineness in quality; were free, or nearly free, and in fairly dry condition. Clips from the Warrego and Maranoa again carried considerable seed, although a number of wools from these districts were less affected than most of the brands catalogued at the first series. The Darling Downs wools included a fair proportion of crossbreds, which were rather disappointing, being poorly grown, somewhat discoloured, and carrying vegetable matter. Wools from the New South Wales border around Boggabilla were of good quality, but carried a fair amount of trefoil burr, and in some instances, were rather poorly grown. Bathurst burr was noticed in clips from districts that were previously more or less free. The catalogues included a showing of bright, clean wools from Warwick; several being in many respects similar to the New England clips. The highest price (/28) in greasy for the series was obtained for the leading line of B in diamond over Glenelg, grown by W. B. Slade and Son, Glengallan, Darling Downs. The quantity catalogued by each firm at the series was as follows:—

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool has been received almost up to the regulation limit by the railways this week, and the receipts show an increase compared to the corresponding period last year. The season's decrease by rail, however, has not yet been wiped out. There has been a decrease in the receipts for the week by boat, which still further adds to the shortage for the season. The quantity for the week and season by rail and boat compares with the corresponding periods last season as follows:—

GIFT CROP.

ALBURY.—About eight months ago Mr. E. W. Shepard, of Joombargana, offered a 90-acre paddock and the seed wherewith to sow it, if the district farmers would put it in and cultivate the crop for patriotic purposes. The proposal was promptly accepted, and the land sown. On New Year's Day a little army of volunteers turned up with a reaper and thrasher, and 16 harvesters, drays, and horses to garner the harvest. At 3.45 p.m. the last grain was in the bags, the total yield being 363 bags, or a little over four bags to the acre. The net proceeds will be about £220, of which 50 per cent. will go to the Y.M.C.A., the rest towards other patriotic purposes to be determined later on.

POULTRY INDUSTRY.

Yesterday the delegates to the recent Interstate Poultry Conference visited the Hawkesbury Agricultural College. To-day the Department of Agriculture has arranged for them to make a tour of inspection of some local poultry farms, in company with Mr. Hadlington, Government Poultry Expert, starting at 9.30 a.m.

On Monday a harbour trip has been arranged, leaving Fort Macquarie at 10 a.m. On Tuesday, upon the invitation of the Minister for Lands, Mr. Ashford, the visiting delegates will visit the soldiers' settlement at Bankstown, and the Grantham stud farm.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

GRAFTON.—During December the Orara Dairy Company manufactured 57,343lb butter, a 30 per cent. increase on November.

TINGHA.—The most bountiful season for years is being experienced here. There is an abundance of grass and herbage, which is being kept fresh by the frequent showers.

DENTAL ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Dental Association of New South Wales was held on Thursday night at the Royal Society's House, Elizabeth-street.

Mr. D. Foley, the retiring president, spoke of the progress which had marked the 15 years of the society's existence. The association in New South Wales, he said, now had a roll of between 400 and 500 members. During the past year steps had been taken to formulate a scheme which, it was hoped, would bring about the amalgamation of the various dental associations in the Commonwealth.

Dr. Sims Lever, the new president, said he looked upon it as an honour to follow such men as Magnus, Peach, Hall, Fitzsimons, Moon, Weston, Green, Allen, Noble, Ogilvie, and Foley. Anything he could do to bring about the proposed amalgamation would be done cheerfully, providing that the rights of the New South Wales association were properly recognised. He was glad of the opportunity to pay a tribute to those members of the association who were serving with the Australian Imperial forces. At a time when patriotism was being tested as it had never been tested before, the dentists of Australia had not been found wanting in courage or in the spirit of self-sacrifice.

The newly-elected officers are:—President, Dr. Sims Lever; vice-president, Mr. K. Sutherland; deputy vice-president, Mr. W. G. M'Kern; hon. treasurer, Mr. R. H. Green; hon. secretary, Mr. A. W. Cleary; hon. recording secretary, Mr. H. L. Hollander; councillors, Messrs. A. Lee, W. R. Fitzsimons, J. H. Watson, F. M'Credie, W. Jones, G. Chauvel, and W. Younger.

PRIMARY INDUSTRIES

DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE FORMED.

At a large meeting held at Culwulla-chambers yesterday afternoon the Primary Industries Development League was launched. The Mayor of Grenfell, Alderman Taylor, presided.

The chairman said the chief purpose of the league, being to foster development, was to undertake propaganda concerning the capabilities of the land, and the production of the country. This propaganda was to include displays of the products of the respective districts. Grenfell district would make a start with a display in Challis House in a couple of weeks, and with other displays in various city shops. These displays would be accompanied by illustrated pamphlets of about 20 pages, and at the annual show in Sydney the products would be continued, and the pamphlets be brought together in one book, which would be distributed throughout Europe. Australia wanted population, and it wanted advertising.

Mr. Fuller, Chief Secretary, wished the league complete success. There were, he said, several directions in which such a body could serve a useful purpose, not only to the State, but to the Commonwealth. One was the building up of a the stanch yeomanry, and thereby keeping Australia a white man's country. By doing this the league would also build up the secondary industries. The Government's policy was to secure the development of country industries. The league, along with decentralisation, which it could profitably consider, should dissociate itself from political effort. If the league's objects were realised, as he hoped they would be, it would be a big factor in the development of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Ashford, Minister for Lands, said the Primary Industries Development League would be welcomed throughout Australia. It aimed at showing what each district could produce, about which there was limited knowledge, even in the districts themselves. Whilst the Tourist Bureau did great services, it activities were largely directed to the pleasure resorts. Something more, however, was required.

Mr. Fuller was elected patron, and Mr. L. A. Saunders secretary, and the following were elected a provisional committee, with power to add, to draft a constitution and carry on the business until the next meeting:—Messrs. G. Valder (Under-Secretary for Agriculture), E. D. Meares (dairying industry), Wm. Brookes (Employers' Federation), D. Carson (wool), J. Taylor (Mayor of Grenfell), Victor Green, J. C. McCallum, Geo. Walker (cereals), Eric Lindeman (wine), H. R. Crowther (fruit), Harry Carter, J. G. R. Bryant (soldier settlers), David Stead (fisheries), J. F. Campbell (president Metropolitan Branch, Farmers and Settlers' Association), W. H. Simpson (president Weddin Shire Council), Jno. Murray, Alex Hay, H. C. Brierley, John Miller, W. G. Ashford, and W. S. Thompson.

MOTOR FATALITIES.

The death of a woman named Mary Ward, who was knocked down by a motor car in Oxford-street, Woollahra, on November 17, was the subject of an inquiry at the City Coroner's Court on Thursday. After the accident deceased was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, where she died from the effects of her injuries on December 28.

Colin Loftus Cardew, living at Lamrock-avenue, the driver of the car, said that on reaching the intersection of Moncur and Oxford streets the wheels turned easily on the Neuchatel asphalt. He was driving at the rate of about 12 miles an hour when he saw a number of people crossing the road. A woman hesitated a couple of times in front of the car, and although he applied the brakes he could not stop the car. He swerved the car towards the gutter. The car and deceased seemed to hit the lamp post at the same moment.

In reply to Mr. S. Stewart, who appeared for deceased's relations, witness said that he was a returned soldier, and had sustained shell shock and gas-poisoning. The accident had brought back the ill-effects of shell-shock.

The Coroner found that deceased died from injuries accidentally received.

At the conclusion of an inquest concerning the death of Glenworth Harold Grant, aged 13, Harold Joseph Rubie, a licensed motor driver, was committed for trial by the Acting City Coroner yesterday. Deceased died from injuries received through being knocked down and run over by a motor car in Oxford-street, Paddington, on December 31.

Constable Bull stated that about 8.30 p.m. he was standing at the intersection of Oxford and Ormond streets, when he saw deceased and another boy proceeding along on "scooters." Deceased had got off the "scooter," when he saw a motor car travelling at the rate of 20 miles an hour proceeding in the direction of the city. The car struck deceased, and tilted him on to the mudguard, carrying him along in that position for about 16 yards. The boy fell off, and the wheels of the car passed over his body.

Harold Joseph Rubie, the driver of the car, said he saw a boy on a "scooter." The next moment he heard a woman scream, and he pulled up the car.

MR. BRUNTNELL AND THE REFERENDUM.

Mr. Albert Bruntnell, M.L.A., addressed a meeting of electors in the Parramatta Town Hall on Thursday night with the object of explaining his position with regard to the reinforcements referendum. The meeting was moderately attended.

Mr. Bruntnell, who received a patient hearing, said he took the platform in support of the first referendum last year, but when the National executive carried the resolution accepting the verdict of the people, and set out that it would give no support to any attempt again to raise the question, he subscribed to that pledge. Therefore, no matter what others did, when the question came up again his chief desire was to honour his pledge. If it was desired to make him a twister and a liar, obliteration from political life was preferable.

A resolution was carried expressing approval of Mr. Bruntnell's attitude and continued confidence in him.

"CONFOUND THEIR POLITICS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Some twelve months ago Australia had reason to deplore the fact that Messrs. Hughes and Cook were then—so far as the public were permitted to know to the contrary—calmly fiddling whilst Rome burned. Recently Australia has been exhibited to the public gaze in an even more humiliating attitude.

It is surely axiomatic—whatever ayone's opinion may be as to the wisdom or expediency of Mr. Hughes's pledge to resign if his modified conscription proposals were rejected—that he would have lifted himself high on a pedestal in public opinion had he unqualifiedly placed his resignation in the hands of the Governor-General the first moment he had satisfied himself the Noes were in the ascendancy. As the facts are, one has to keep constantly before one the gruesome alternative of Tudor and Co. to sustain one's faith in W. M. Hughes.

Are there no patriots in the community sufficiently able and high-minded to sink all minor differences and appeal to the best instincts of Australians for their whole-hearted support as a leader intent solely upon aiding the Empire in her life and death struggle?

With remembrances of Belgium, the Lusitania, Edith Cavell, Louvain, Reims, the submarine outrages, and the thousand and one other hideous villainies of the enemy in our minds' eye, why cannot politicians rise above the level of contemptibly mean bickerings as to personal power, and electrify into solid tangible power, the splendid spirit of patriotism and love of Empire that inspired the glorious deeds of our Anzacs, as also the many soul-stirring contributions of naval, military, and monetary help Australia has voluntarily given in the Empire's hour of need?

For heaven's sake let us even at this late date in the war grip and master the huge problems that confront us, leaving all minor matters for post-war settlement. When danger of outrage to our womenkind and children, and of the less harrowing risk of loss of property, and of self-respect as free members of a free country, is past, the country can then perhaps afford to let the peddling politician have the time of his life again juggling with the intricacies of party.

Until Germany is thoroughly beaten, until it can be assured that the noble instincts that govern the conduct of that much-maligned individual "a true gentleman" are to dominate civilisation in lieu of the brutal coarseness of ... Hun, no woman or child in our Empire is guarded against outrage and cruelty. We can leave man out of it, as if the conduct of our politicians is to serve as guide it is manifest man can, and only too often does, look out well enough for himself.

Is there no one amongst us who can and will think and act Imperially in the big questions that only matter in these days? Hundreds of women and men are sacrificing themselves, giving their time and best ability absolutely free of remuneration in war work generally. Is there to be no analogy to their patriotic lead amongst Australian politicians of repute? First, last, and all the time—Win the War.

I am, etc.,
F. D. BELL.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1918.

THE LAST WORD.

Among the great speeches of this war, assuredly none is greater than that which President Wilson has just delivered to Congress, and through Congress to the whole world. It has followed swiftly on the heels of another great speech—that of Mr. Lloyd George before the trades union delegates at Westminster—and as is remarked in the cable news from Washington it is "the last word" on the war aims of the Allies. It represents the aims of a hundred millions, says the "New York Tribune," likening it to a second emancipation declaration, and to-day, as never before, the entire American nation marches behind the President. But it represents much more than this. It represents the aims of all democracies longing for the emancipation of the world, weary and tired of war and wishing an end to war for all time. It may be a Utopian dream, this of a world in which wars shall cease for ever, but at least it may be said that if the war aims of the Allies, as laid down so definitely by the two great spokesmen of the Anglo-Saxon people, are realised, with a league of nations guaranteeing future peace, we shall have made immeasurable progress towards that ideal state. Throughout the Allied programme runs the one great principle of justice to all people and nationalities, and their right to live on equal terms of liberty and safety with one another, be they strong or weak. To the vindication of this principle, says the great President of the American nation, the people of the United States are ready to devote their lives, their honour, and everything that they possess. It was with almost identical words that President Wilson closed the historic message to Congress in which he accepted, on behalf of his nation, the challenge thrown down by Germany. To lead this great and peaceful nation into the most terrible of all wars, he said then, was a distressing and oppressive duty, but right was more precious than peace, and the American people would fight for those things which they had always held nearest to their hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government, for the liberties of small nations, "for the universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as will bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free." To the American people, he added, had come the privilege of fighting for these things, of pouring out their blood and treasure—"everything we are, everything we have"—in order that the great principles they had always cherished might be vindicated. To-day President Wilson, definitely and unequivocally, restates the aims of the Great Republic, so that all who read may understand. No statesman, as he tells us, with the least conception of his responsibility would consent to the continuation of this tragical outpouring of blood unless he was sure beyond peradventure that the great principle involved demanded it. And there is nothing in the speech more striking than the wisdom, the far-sightedness, and the humanity of his references to Russia. "There is a voice calling for these definitions of principle and purpose which is, it seems to me, more thrilling and more compelling than any of the many moving voices with which the troubled air of the world is filled. It is the voice of the Russian people."

Rescued from the most degrading, the most corrupt, the weakest and the most vicious Government in the world, Russia is to-day experiencing all the pain and travail of her new birth; and it is not surprising that, instead of leaving her prostrate and helpless before the Germanic vulture that waits to rend and destroy her, the great democracy of the New World should turn to this new-born democracy of the Old World with sympathy and promise of help. With her material power shattered apparently beyond recovery, the soul of Russia yet lives, strong in faith and purpose. She is as a fallen giant struggling to break the chains, a new-born democracy trying to become articulate. To this nation in the hour of trial and defeat America holds out the hand of friendship and regard. Nor does America profess her friendship only, she also promises Russia her protection; and in this President Wilson expresses the better mind of all the democracies of the world. If Russia will accept this protection she may save herself from becoming the vassal of Germany; if she refuses it, nothing can save her. After the experience they have gained at Brest-Litovsk of the real designs of the Prussian militarists, it should be clear to the present-day leaders of Russia that their ideals can never be realised until the militarism which has plunged Europe into a welter of blood is destroyed once and for all. It is for this purpose that the Allies are banded together in a great league of nations to-day. There is, as has now been made clear by the speeches of Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson, no confusion of counsel among the adversaries of the Central Powers, no uncertainty of principle, no vagueness of detail. It is for Germany to answer these speeches. The last word has been spoken for the Allies, and the issue now rests with Germany—peace on the terms laid down in these speeches, or war to a finish. If it is to be war, no matter how long and how bloody it may be, the democracies of the world will fight on till the end—the only possible end. We know how Britain strove to prevent this war. We know how America strove to prevent it. Mr. Gerard has told us in his memoirs how, when war seemed inevitable, he wrote to the German Chancellor:—"Is there nothing that my country can do—nothing I can do toward stopping this dreadful war? I am sure that the President would approve any act of mine looking toward peace." To that letter he never received a reply. And at the very end of his book the late American Ambassador to Berlin writes:—"There must be no German peace. The old regime left in control of Germany, of Bulgaria, of Turkey, would only seek a favourable moment to renew the war, to strive again for the mastery of the world." On Britain and America now falls the giant task. One of Mr. Lloyd George's great speeches was made at the luncheon tendered to him in April last by the American Luncheon Club, when he said:—"To-morrow—not perhaps a distant to-morrow—war may be abolished forever from the category of human crimes, and the peoples of the earth emerge into the full light of a perfect day." It is for this that Britain and America, France and Italy, and we may still add Russia, are striving.

GETTING TO BUSINESS.

For some time now the community has been satiated with what cannot but be regarded as politics run mad. And by this time the community is fairly tired of it all. We are still at war, though that fact appears almost to have been forgotten amid the clash of parties. In former times Government activities and the real business of the nation were really things apart. Now the activities of the Government reorganised upon war lines are all-important. Never before has the Government responsible for our defence had greater burdens cast upon it. Not only is it responsible for the maintenance of the army in the field and its reinforcement, but it has also accepted the responsibility for organising a large part of our export trade. It is collecting and distributing over 100 millions sterling per annum among our primary producers. Besides, it has taken a hand in connection with our finances such as would have been impossible in pre-war days. It has prevented the investment of capital without its express permission, and by every means in its power it is persuading those with funds at their disposal to subscribe to war loans unprecedented in Australia. It is discouraging all enterprises that are not calculated to assist towards winning the war. But all this is being done in a haphazard way. Whatever has been done has been accomplished on more or less official lines. Businesses large beyond all precedent are being conducted by men who never before had experience of businesses ever so small. So farmers complain that they have been treated badly over the sale of their wheat, and there has been some complaint that the wool business has been handled with less expedition than was desirable. Those who see our surplus grain accumulating far more rapidly than our storage accommodation is growing, view with regret the delays in getting busy with the shipbuilding programme. They fear that Europe may starve while Australia is a land of plenty merely because Australia cannot get her surplus food over the seas. Then, again, in the matter of finance there may be trouble later on in raising necessary war loans if our produce cannot be realised. Should the Government make itself responsible for the supply of cornsacks for farmers during next harvest or leave their provision to the ordinary trading channels? These and many kindred problems are essentially problems that should be solved by the business man, not by the typical official, still less by the politician.

Then, again, there is quite another type of problem that badly requires solution at the hands of someone capable of understanding it in all its ramifications. There are those problems that touch the interrelationship of this heterogeneous Empire. Everyone wishes that the best results should be obtained by Australia from its Empire connection. Yet the scheme of double and treble income taxes is quite disruptive of all inter-Imperial business connection. As matters stand to-day it would pay a British investor infinitely better to sink his money in, say, Argentina than in Australia, just because our politicians have woven round us a ridiculous taxation system. Of course against this it may be urged that this is not a problem of present importance since there is no immediate likelihood of capital coming this way till the war at least is over. But this is not all, for the same disability which is calculated to prevent the investment of new capital within the Commonwealth also operates in bringing about the withdrawal of capital already invested here. Nothing could be more stupid than this. This drawback tends also to operate in another way that seems to have been almost entirely overlooked. As Government stock in Australia is free from income taxation investors domiciled abroad are tempted to put their money into Government stock instead of into public companies carrying on business here. Thus Governments are induced to plan still more Socialistic enterprises. There are other problems connected with our Imperial connection that should also receive much more attention than they do. Australia is essentially a producer of raw materials, some of them very valuable ones, and some of which we have a virtual monopoly. Has any attempt so far been made to render the Empire reasonably self-supporting?

Quite another series of questions should be considered in these days of enforced economy. Everyone who has even a glimmering of what is going on at the Treasury must realise that we cannot continue to borrow large sums of money to enable us to carry on our share of the burden of war without heavier taxes being in prospect. No one who knows anything of these things would be surprised if, before we are very much older, 50 per cent. of the larger incomes are demanded back again by the State and Commonwealth taxing authorities. When this comes about it will be needful for individuals to curtail their outgoings in a somewhat radical way. To some extent this necessity has already arisen, but there is still a large section of the people which has not yet begun to feel the pinch. As soon as they do they will insist on the various Governments that tax them keeping their own houses in order. They will object to seeing wasteful expenditure and woeful muddling in connection with public works and Government services. They may even ask why they should continue to support seven expensive legislatures and all the rest of the frills attached to separate sovereign States. They will want to know why there should be six Agents-General in London, together with a High Commissioner with semi-diplomatic status, while there is not a single official agent at the world's metropolis to whom the business man in Australia can write upon business matters with confidence that his interests will neither be neglected nor muddled. Then, again, there is the overlapping of Commonwealth and State departments. Even now the taxpaying public of this State is being asked to make returns of its income for last year to a State department. Each of us has done something of the same sort for the Commonwealth taxing authority for a period that does not precisely coincide with the State period, and we are asked to pay the tax at a rate that is not the same and is calculated differently with varying exemptions and deductions. The community is about tired of all this muddling. It is time that the politicians practised the efficiency and economy that they are so fond of preaching.

AUSTRALIA'S FORCES.

Other guests of the mess were:—Brigadier-General G. Lee, C.M.G., D.S.O., Brigadier-General J. M. Antill, C.B., C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel R. W. Lenehan, V.D., and Mr. C. A. Jaques, Lieut. D. Drummond, D.C.M., presided.

At last meeting of the Dundas Council Alderman Spurway moved that a letter of congratulation be sent to Brigadier-General Cox, C.M.G., upon the high distinction conferred upon him by the King. The Mayor, Alderman John Neil, in seconding the motion, remarked: The General had risen from the ranks, and had brought honour not only to himself but to the whole of the district. The resolution was carried amid applause.

MR. HUGHES.

WILLING TO RETIRE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In his speech in the House of Representatives to-day the Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, again held out the olive branch to the opposition. He emphasised the fact that co-operation in war work was necessary, and he said that if his presence in the Ministry was an obstacle he would efface himself.

Asked if he would comment on this offer, Mr. Tudor declined to do so. Other members of his party were, however, not equally reticent. "Let him retire first," said one, "then we will see."

REFERENDUM RETURNS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

No further referendum returns were received to-day by the central electoral authorities. The number of votes yet to be scrutinised is approximately 9936.

WALSH ISLAND.

IS IT A FAILURE?

NEGOTIATIONS FOR TRANSFER.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The Walsh Island Government Engineering Works have not been the success which the Labour Government anticipated they would be when the foundation-stone was laid on June 15, 1913. The cause of this may be attributed to several things, but probably the war is more responsible than anything else. Just prior to the outbreak of the war Walsh Island was making good headway, and it had been decided to construct a huge dock. This, however, was never commenced.

The Island has been engaged in building vessels for the State Government, and doing repair work, also constructing bridges for the North Coast railway; and at one time manufacturing munitions for the Imperial Government. When the works were in full swing there were as many as 1200 employees on the island. The munition work, however, did not last long, and when the North Coast railway works were stopped Walsh Island ceased to manufacture iron railway bridges.

When the Federal Government commenced inquiring into the possibility of building ships in this State it appeared that Walsh Island would be given a number of vessels to construct. That was seven or eight months ago, and at the time it was stated that if the shipbuilding was not proceeded with the works might close down. Since then the number of employees has dwindled down to about 500, and the work that is now being done is principally repairing. About 12 vessels, trawlers, dredges, tugs, and vehicular ferry steamers, have been launched; but only three or four have been completed during the whole time that the works have been in full swing. There are now seven or eight vessels lying off the south-western side of the island, waiting for engines, and boilers to be fitted into them.

There is a firm belief that if the Broken Hill Proprietary Company obtains a lease of Walsh Island it will be a benefit, not only to the district, but also to the State and the Commonwealth.

THE NEGOTIATIONS.

Although no official statement could be obtained yesterday, inquiries showed that the Broken Hill Proprietary Company has been negotiating for a lease of the Walsh Island Government Engineering Works, and that while the New South Wales Government was agreeable, the Federal Government hesitated about giving its consent to the change.

THE CENSORSHIP.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Senator Pearce, Minister for Defence, made the following reply to-day to the further remarks by the New South Wales Minister for Health (Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald) on the censorship:—

"I make the following categorical replies to Mr. Fitzgerald:

"(1) Not one line of war news that comes from Great Britain has ever been deleted by the censorship in Australia. Messages containing war news which have been passed by the censorship in London come before the censors as a matter of routine (as do all cables), but they are not, and never have been, interfered with here by the deletion of any portion of them. Mr. Fitzgerald is challenged to produce evidence of one single instance in which deletions have been made in war news from Great Britain.

"(2) The instruction to withhold the news of the sinking of the Southland was received by cablegram from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, acting on the request of the British Admiralty. The censorship cabled to London asking that the news might be published in Australia, in order to allay the anxiety of people having relations on the Southland, and a directly negative answer was received. Subsequently permission to release the whole of the facts was received from London, and was immediately given effect to. Up to the time of release to the Australian Press no reports had been allowed publication in the English papers. Any information to the contrary which Mr. Fitzgerald may have is absolutely incorrect. In addition to this, the Secretary for State was cabled to by the Commonwealth Government for permission to publish, but this also was refused.

"(3) No censorship of referendum speeches in newspaper offices was ever ordered by, or carried out by, the Department of Defence.

"(4) Herewith is a copy of the first instruction for the censorship of referendum matter issued by the Minister for Defence:—'Re compulsory service referendum campaign, the following rules are to be imposed on all contributions to campaign literature, Press, etc. The following is prohibited:—(1) Any reflection on any of the Allied nations; (2) anything calculated to create disaffection within the Empire or Commonwealth; (3) publication of any statement or allegation obviously false or misleading; (4) any statement prejudicial to recruiting.'

"(5) The results of the Canadian election were not prevented publication by the censorship.

"(6) Certain information with regard to loans floated in London was temporarily withheld from publication under instructions from Mr. W. G. Higgs, who at that time held the office of Treasurer.

"I do not propose to adopt Mr. Fitzgerald's suggestion that the Press should be allowed freely to discuss the censorship, for the reason that to do so would necessitate replies by the Department and the censorship, which would reveal not merely to our friends, the general public of Australia, but also to our enemies the necessary precautions that have been taken under the censorship to prevent trading with the enemy and the imparting of valuable information. This would necessarily have to be discussed if the whole question of the censorship is to be fully ventilated in the Press. For the same reason I do not propose to recommend to the Government the appointment of a commission to do the same thing."

INVALID SOLDIERS.

RETURNING TO-MORROW.

Another contingent of invalid soldiers will arrive to-morow, and friends and relations who have received tickets marked "A" from the Staff Officer for Invalids, will be admitted to the Anzac Buffet at 9 a.m. The names of cot cases will be posted at the buffet as soon as they arrive, and their relations will be able to meet them at Randwick Hospital or Broughton Hall.

The Queenslanders will be taken direct to Rose Hall, Darlinghurst, where lunch will be served by the Red Cross Kitchen. Relations and friends may visit them, and they will leave at 2.30 p.m. to catch their train north.

Motor cars numbered on the register of the Red Cross Society from 193 to 240 inclusive are required to be at the No. 1 wharf, Woolloomooloo, at 8.50 a.m. Cars numbered from 241 to 259 inclusive are required to be in attendance at Rose Hall, Forbes-street, Darlinghurst, at 2.30 p.m.

The Voluntary Aid Detachments on duty will be:—Wharf, Coogee V.A.D.; Anzac Buffet, Leichhardt, with Miss Evans, and Mosman V.A.D.; Rose Hall, Junior Red Cross; Queenslanders' train, Glebe Men's V.A.D.

COMMONWEALTH BANK.

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT PROPOSED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Mr. Austin Chapman has signified his intention of moving in the House of Representatives at the earliest opportunity that a Royal Commission be appointed to inquire into and report upon the operations and control of the Commonwealth Bank and its relations with the Federal Government, with a view of enlarging its usefulness to the Government and to the people generally. It is understood that Mr. Chapman will urge the advisableness of appointing a board of management, and of increasing the usefulness of the bank in developing the resources of the Commonwealth.

INCREASED FREIGHTS.

ACTION BY IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT.

The Imperial Government has increased the freight charges on meat from Australia to England from £3/12/6 per ton to £7/10/.

The Imperial Government has control over the whole of the British mercantile marine, and the increase in the prices, which is over 100 per cent., is, it is understood, in consequence of the increased cost of working the tonnage.

REASSURING NEWS

FIGURES IN ALLIES' FAVOUR

LONDON, Jan. 10.

In connection with last week's sinkings by submarines it is pointed out in authoritative circles that it is unfair to take two or three weeks' sinkings as a basis of criticism. The curves which show the number of sinkings by submarines, the number of submarines sunk, and the new output of tonnage are entirely in our favour.

It is confidently hoped, with the advance of knowledge in the new offensive and defensive measures now coming into operation, that any hope the enemy entertains of bringing the Allies to their knees by the submarine campaign is doomed to disappointment.

The situation certainly is not becoming formidable.

FRENCH LOSS.

French shipping returns for the week ending January 6 show the arrivals numbered 857 and the departures 728. One vessel over, but nothing under, 1600 tons was sunk. Four were unsuccessfully attacked.

A CALLOUS FOE.

A big German submarine attacked a small unarmed fishing drifter on Wednesday morning in the North Sea. The submarine's gunfire capsized the drifter, and the crew clung to the bottom during a heavy snowstorm. The submarine came up and viewed the struggling men, but rendered no assistance, and went away. The crew were ultimately rescued. One was killed, and one badly injured.

WAR AIMS.

PRESIDENT'S DEFINITION.

The United Press Agency in Washington learns authoritatively that President Wilson's reference to free trade is not intended to impose the freetrade doctrine, but to advocate equal treatment of all nations.

Mr. Balfour, speaking at Edinburgh, eulogised President Wilson's speech. "The day America entered the war," he said, "was one of the most important in the annals of mankind. We are not fighting for selfish objects. While a Power like Germany exists with her methods and ambitions, not one of Mr. Lloyd George's or President Wilson's objects can be realised. It requires more than a parochial outlook to see that our highest moral and national interests are bound up with the fate of Belgium."

He recognised difficulties in the League of Nations ideal, but hoped the world would take the problem in hand and see it through. All the horrors we have gone through could not equal the horror that would befal us and our children if the war ended in a German peace, he added.

DUTCH OPINION.

According to a wireless message, the Amsterdam "Handelsblad" says President Wilson's peace will only be established when all the countries are in an exhausted, ruined, and starved condition, compared with which Germany's condition after the Thirty Years' War was a paradise.

The "Het Volk" says that President Wilson's terms are impossible for the Central Powers. The Entente demands a positive profit, and President Wilson's conditions imply a positive loss for Austria and Germany.

The "Tijd" remarks that Germany's answer to all suggestions for a durable peace is the sinking of another hospital ship, which is bound to cause a wave of indignation to sweep over Europe.

COMMENT IN GERMANY.

Amsterdam advices show that the German Press unanimously condemns President Wilson. The "North German Gazette" says President Wilson's 14 points are not a programme of world peace, but of provocation for endless wars. The "Taglische Rundschau" reproaches President Wilson for fanning the flames of Germany's internal differences upon which he bases his hopes of an early peace.

The "Vossische Zeitung" says the President's message is nothing but a well-sounding appendix to Mr. Lloyd George's speech.

FRENCH SOCIALIST'S VIEW.

M. Renaudel, a French Socialist leader, states that President Wilson's message makes real those problems which politicians have regarded as dreams.

POST-WAR TRADE.

POSITION OF GERMANY.

LONDON, Jan. 10.

Mr. J. M. Robertson, M.P., in the course of a speech, said that whatever views people might hold regarding freetrade, it was obvious we could not trade with the enemy as heretofore, but he could not conceive of a method by a tariff or otherwise which would secure our object without injuring ourselves. Any tariff scheme would have the effect of promoting Germany's trade.

A telegram from Berne says the Germanophile "Zurich Post" declares that the war has destroyed Germany's policy of commercial penetration in the Entente countries and America. Germany must abandon her seapower ideas, and endeavour to secure an expansion by land.

The "Deutsche Tageszeitung" declares that the war has been caused by Germany dumping cheap goods all over the world.

GERMAN COLONIES.

MUST NOT BE RETURNED.

The conference of the British Workers' League has inaugurated a German Lost Colonies Committee, which opposes the handing back of any colonies to Germany. The league passed a resolution repudiating the Labour party's proposals. Sir John M'Call (Tasmanian Agent-General), in moving the resolution, said it was essential for permanent peace that Germany should have no jumping-off places in the Pacific or South Africa. Internationalisation was impracticable. He urged consultation with the dominions. Mr. J. A. Seddon, Sir John Taverner, and Mr. F. M. Fisher supported the motion.

Lord Sydenham wrote:—"The Labour proposals are preposterous. The question concerns Africa and Australasia, who must have a powerful voice in the decision. Australians and New Zealanders evicted the Germans from the Pacific. Therefore, it is futile for the Labourites to dispose of those possessions without consultation with the dominions. It is unthinkable that the colonies should be handed back to the most barbarous nation in the world."

Lord Beresford wrote that if Britain attempted the restoration the dominions would not consent.

DISTRESS IN DENMARK.

Copenhagen advices state that over 3000 labourers are idle. Factories have been closed owing to the lack of raw materials, and industry is threatened with a complete catastrophe. There is great distress among workers.

SHROUDED IN SNOW.

WESTERN BATTLEFIELDS.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

Mr. Philip Gibbs telegraphs: Despite Wednesday night's thaw, the battlefields, after another heavy blizzard, are still under a deep shroud. It is strangely and uncannily quiet. The guns are mostly silent owing to the poor visibility through the whirling snowflakes.

Sir Douglas Haig's final report on Thursday night stated: London and Rifle regiments successfully raided three points in trenches south-eastward of Ypres, inflicting many casualties, and taking a few prisoners.

Hostile artillery has been active in the neighbourhoods of Bullecourt, Lens, and Ypres.

Aeroplanes on Wednesday bombed the enemy's billets and hutments and machine-gunned troops in the trenches from a low altitude. We brought down four and drove down two hostile craft. Three of ours are missing, two of which collided over the enemy's lines.

THE COMING OFFENSIVE.

M. Marcel Hutin, writing in the "Echo de Paris," states that General von Woyrsch, who has just been created a Field-Marshal, will command the German offensive which will commence when the weather permits.

AIR FIGHTING.

GERMAN CLAIMS.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A wireless German official message states: The enemy's aircraft losses in December were 9 balloons and 119 aeroplanes, of which 47 fell in our line.

We lost 82 aeroplanes and two balloons.

CAMBRAI SET-BACK.

RUMOURS DISCOUNTED.

The "Daily Express" understands that no generals or other officers have been sent home in consequence of the German counter-attack at Cambrai on November 30. The facts wholly contradict rumours which have been lately growing fantastic. Nobody is likely to be retired, because after the Germans attacked a loosely-held section of the line they got it hot and strong. We killed and wounded more Germans than on any previous day on the West front. We killed so many that some of our machine-gunners became physically sick of the killing.

The "Daily Express" adds that recent changes at general headquarters have no connection with the Cambrai affair.

AMERICA'S ARMY.

MILLION AND A HALF.

Advices from Washington state that Mr. Baker (Secretary for War) told the United States Senate that the military had provided for a United States Army of 110,856 officers and 1,428,650 men. Transportation and training have been carried on with unprecedented speed. A substantial army is now in France. The spirit of the army was high, and the deathrate lower than in civil life.

"More has been done," he declared, "than anybody believed. The American accomplishments will depress the German moral when it is realised we have not blundered nor hesitated, but brought our full power in men and resources quickly against Germany. No army of a similar size in the world's history has ever been raised, equipped, and trained so quickly."

Mr. Baker stated that the United States' army in France was ready for active service. Arms and clothing were now available to equip the entire forces during 1918.

AVIATION PROGRESS.

Mr. Howard Coffin, chairman of the Aircraft Production Board, says the United States has made tremendous strides in aviation. There are 86,000 men in the Aviation camps. The Government has ordered several thousand aeroplanes from abroad, and is initiating a huge system of training stations, and also standardising engines and parts.

CANADA THERE TO THE DEATH.

A Washington report says that the Duke of Devonshire (Governor-General of Canada), in the course of a speech, said: "Canada realises that this is a struggle to the death, and will fight till the end, confident of victory. As far as men, money, and munitions and food are concerned, the word 'enough' has disappeared from the vocabulary. We have substituted the word 'more.' Canada will support the Allied leaders to the uttermost."

WHEAT FROM AMERICA.

America proposes to export 90,000,000 bushels of wheat to meet the shortage of the Allies, and is most rigidly limiting home consumption.

VOTES FOR WOMEN.

HOUSE OF LORDS' DECISION.

LONDON, Jan. 10.

The House of Lords carried the proposal to extend the franchise to women by 134 votes to 65.

Lord Finlay said the proposal to enfranchise women was revolutionary. He did not believe that the majority of women or of the nation desired it. He criticised the proposal to exclude the younger and more buoyant women under 30, and asked what might be the effect of war weariness. They might be snared by specious promises of peace, leaving Prussian militarism unbroken. The majority of women would be proof against it, but if the result of the women's vote was a hasty and inconclusive peace there would be an end to the country's greatness and the Empire's existence.

Lord Selborne, in opposing Lord Loreburn's amendment to exclude women altogether from the franchise, said the effect of deleting the clause would be to split the nation from top to bottom.

The Archbishop of Canterbury supported women's enfranchisement.

ACTION IN AMERICA.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.

The House of Representatives has passed a motion in favour of woman suffrage by 274 votes to 136.

The motion was passed by exactly the necessary two-thirds majority. Leaders are most elated. They are confident that a majority of the States will ratify it before the end of 1919.

ADVANCE IN WAGES.

The Ministry of Labour, in connection with the recent advance of 12½ per cent. to plain time workers in shipbuilding and munitions trades, agrees to extend it to time workers not yet receiving it, and adds that as far as pieceworkers are concerned low piece prices will be revised.

QUEENSLAND'S TIMELY GIFT.

Seven hundred necessitous boarding-house-keepers in Ramsgate and Broadstairs are sharing Queensland's opportune gift of sugar, cornflour, and tinned beef.

RUSSIA.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH BULGARIA.

SEPARATE PEACE REPORTED.

LONDON, Jan. 10.

It is reported in New York that Russia and Bulgaria have signed a separate peace.

The Swiss paper "Der Bund" (Berne) states that a separate peace has been signed between Russia and Bulgaria.

THE COSSACKS.

A message from Petrograd says the majority of the Cossacks are following General Kaledin, who considers the main business of the Cossacks is to consolidate democratic and republican power in the Don district. He considers it is not desirable to interfere with the inner life of the other parts of the Russian Republic. He is ready to fight the Bolsheviks only if they attempt an aggressive policy against the Don.

General Alexieff, however, who is leading an officers' corps of 25,000 strong, considers it is necessary to organise for a struggle against the Bolsheviks on an all-Russian scale, and to create a moderate liberal regime for Russia. Monarchical principles are strong among General Alexieff's group.

General Savinkoff supports General Alexieff. He considers strong measures are necessary against the Bolsheviks.

General Korniloff is not taking an active part in the controversy.

The Leipsic "Nepeste Nachrichten" states that Herr von Kuhlmann's position as Chancellor is precarious, because he allowed Count Czernin to dupe him at Brest-Litovsk.

GERMAN MUTINEERS.

PITCHED BATTLE WITH TROOPS.

The "New York World's" Petrograd correspondent interviewed deserting German officers, who confirm the story of the mutiny of 25,000 German soldiers. The mutineers continue to seize trains, arms, and food. They killed 300 regular troops in a pitched battle. The officers added that the troops consider that the West front means certain death.

Artillery is in constant readiness in Berlin to meet a Proletariat uprising.

MESOPOTAMIA.

DESPATCH BY LATE GENERAL MAUDE.

LONDON, Jan. 10.

A despatch by the late General Maude, dated October 15, has been gazetted. It deals with the operations in April, which ended by driving back two enemy army corps into Jebel, Hamrin, and Tekrit.

General Maude explains that it was the abnormal heat and duststorms which frustrated the capture of Ramadie in July. He describes the final capture of Ramadie on September 29, and says the health of the troops during the summer had been uniformly satisfactory—cholera, enteric, and scurvy being either non-existent or negligible.

ITALIAN RECOVERY.

Official advices received in Washington from Rome stated that the rejuvenated Italians, with renewed spirit, are taking the offensive, and have advanced a short distance.

MURDER CASE.

FICTITIOUS ACCOMPLICE.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

A remarkable development occurred in a murder trial at the Old Bailey, in which Arthur Destamer, soldier, was charged with the murder of Captain Tighe. The latter was killed with a poker, under mysterious circumstances, at Wimbledon. Destamer asserted that another man accompanied him for the purpose of burglary, and that his partner murdered Tighe. Giving evidence to-day Destamer said his partner was an Australian deserter named Reginald Fisher. The prosecution allege that Destamer's story of a partner is a mere fiction, and that Destamer alone was the author of the murder. A verdict of wilful murder was returned, and the jury added that there was no such man as Fisher.

COAL AGREEMENT.

VICTORIA'S NEEDS.

DISCUSSION IN CABINET.

Yesterday morning a special meeting of the State Cabinet was held to consider the position created by the refusal of the Victorian Ministry to conclude the agreement for the supply of New South Wales coal.

When seen subsequently Mr. Holman stated that his Government was in communication with the Victorian Ministry. He would not say anything else, but other Ministers expressed the opinion that the criticism was due to want of knowledge.

It is understood that a report was circulated in Melbourne to the effect that a contract had been entered into for 1,000,000 tons annually. It is pointed out that the coal to be supplied was that required for the Victorian Government services—400,000 or 500,000 tons annually.

A NEWCASTLE RESOLUTION.

VICTORIAN GOVERNMENT COMMENDED.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Members of the council of the Newcastle Chamber of Commerce made adverse comment at the meeting of that body to-day on the proposed contract for Victoria to take the output of the Richmond Main and Pelaw Main collieries for five years. The following motion was carried unanimously:—

"That a very strong protest be made to the New South Wales Government against any attempt to try to force the Victorian Government to carry out the arrangement for the purchase for five years of the whole of the coal from the Pelaw Main and Richmond Main collieries; and that a letter be sent to the Victorian Government commending them for turning the proposed contract down."

VIEWS OF MINERS' FEDERATION.

Mr. A. Lewis, treasurer of the Colliery Employees' Federation, speaking to-day on behalf of the executive officers, said that the action of the Victorian Government in regard to the proposed contract was very satisfactory to the vast majority of the colliery employees, and no doubt to the proprietors also. The giving of a contract for a million tons of coal as a monopoly to one colliery proprietor would mean serious industrial trouble in the north, as well as partial closing of smaller collieries which were at times unfortunately situated as regards trade supplies.

"COOEE!"

BLESSED WORD FROM MESOPOTAMIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The following cable message has been received by the Prime Minister from the officer commanding the Australian Wireless Section in Mesopotamia:—

"The Australians in Mesopotamia heartily reciprocate the good wishes of yourself, the Government, and people of the Commonwealth. Our thoughts are ever with you all, and we hope by our actions to prove worthy representatives of our fair land. Cooee!"

WAR NOTES.

THE CAMBRAI OPERATIONS.

The cabled extract from the "Daily Express" regarding the recent Cambrai offensive suggests that the paper has knowledge of the facts adduced at the recent inquiry into the manner in which the operations around Cambrai were conducted. The paper states that "the facts wholly contradict the rumours which have lately been growing fantastic." Apart from the somewhat doubtful comments of Mr. Frank Simmonds, who stated in the New York "Tribune," about the middle of last month, that General Byng had "neglected his flanks on the Scheldt," and that "his attempt unreasonably to enlarge his success was a blunder," we have little definite information regarding these fantastic rumours to which the "Daily Express" refers. The critic mentioned above was apparently drawing his own conclusions, after endeavouring to read between the lines of the official reports. Whether there was any justification for his definite charge against General Byng or not, there does not seem to have been the slightest ground for the suggestion which he made at the time that "even Sir Douglas Haig might find his personal position insecure." While there was undoubtedly a great deal of adverse criticism in England regarding the Cambrai operations, as was shown by the fact that an inquiry was ordered, the facts as reported in the communiques did not at any time indicate that any serious blunders had been perpetrated. Taking the operation as a whole, these facts showed that the initial success of the British attack exceeded anticipations; a greater area of ground was captured than had been thought possible; the enemy afterwards counter-attacked the new line, and achieved a certain amount of success, eventually compelling the British to readjust their line. At the present time the British still hold a big portion of the ground captured in the initial attack. Had General Byng's offensive on November 20 last penetrated no further than the front at present occupied by the British on the Cambrai sector it would still have been regarded as a pronounced success, and there would have been no "fantastic rumours" floating around regarding the mistakes of generals. It is true the British lost a number of guns and prisoners as a result of the enemy's counter-attack, and it is this fact which has no doubt been largely responsible for the adverse criticism regarding the Cambrai operations. The British people had witnessed a series of important British successes since the commencement of the Somme offensive, and in practically no case had their troops been compelled to relinquish their grip on the captured ground. Objectives had been fixed, and, with one or two minor exceptions, when once these were reached they were held. In the Cambrai offensive there were no fixed objectives, and the front on which the troops eventually rested was not adopted as a matter of choice. Weaknesses could hardly be avoided, and when the enemy discovered one of these weak points there was no alternative but to readjust the British line. The result of the inquiry, if made public, will be most interesting, as there is much that we would like to know regarding the Cambrai offensive, apart from the question of the possible mistakes of officers.

TRAINING AMERICA'S ARMY.

The statements made by Mr. Baker, United States Secretary for War, regarding the growth of America's army will receive more serious consideration than some of the strange communiques which he issues from time to time with reference to the general war situation. The raising of an army of over a million and a half men must be regarded as an important factor in connection with the future conduct of the war, and the enemy is not likely to underestimate its significance. The statement that a substantial army is now in France confirms the belief that the transportation of American troops has been progressing satisfactorily. Up to the end of October there were about 100,000 American officers and men in France, but this number has apparently been considerably increased since then. Most of the troops are being landed at Bordeaux, whence they are moved into the training camps situated in a region where the climate and conditions generally are much more favourable than those experienced by the troops on the British front. Mr. Baker says that no army of similar size in the world's history has ever been raised, equipped, and trained so quickly. "The training work mapped out by the War Department for National Guard and National Army Divisions before they are regarded as ready for duty abroad," says the November issue of "Current History," "is based on a sixteen weeks' course of the most intensive kind of work in the open, varied with lectures by American and Allied officers who are experts in modern warfare. Great stress is laid upon the necessity for night training. Trench raiding, scouting, trench building, and operations of all kinds which may be called for in actual combat are duplicated at the camps through the night hours. Target practice runs through the entire course, and the schedules call for 40 hours' training each week. A striking feature of the programme is the fact that practically the entire period of sixteen weeks is devoted to training individuals, platoons, and companies. Brigade, divisional, and even regimental exercises are reserved for a later period, with some minor exceptions during the last weeks." This, of course, is only preliminary to the final training which is carried out on French soil.

DEMAND FOR RAW MATERIAL.

The message from Copenhagen, referring to the unemployment in factories consequent upon the lack of raw material, serves to remind us that this is going to be one of the most difficult questions which Germany will have to face after the war. In his recent speech, outlining the Allies' war aims, Mr. Lloyd George referred to the shortage of raw material which would exist after the war, and reminded Germany that this would be more acute the longer the war lasted. He also impressed upon the Central Powers the fact that it was inevitable that the countries controlling the sources of raw material should desire to help themselves and their friends first. Dr. Dernburg, formerly German Colonial Secretary, recognised the seriousness of the position in an article written in June of last year. "The Central Powers," he wrote, "have used up their natural resources to a greater extent than the Entente. . . . In every country the means of production have been exposed to a tremendous strain. . . The world's means of transport are to a large extent destroyed by sea and rendered inefficient by land. There will be an immeasurable and world-wide hunger for raw material and commodities of all kinds. Can it be satisfied in a short time? The answer is, No. . . . Leaving out of account the difficulties of transport and exchange, the fact remains that all countries will compete for raw materials. The exclusion of the Central Powers and their Allies from the number of consumers has nowhere produced a surplus of raw materials. But even inside every single national economic unit a competition has grown up between various demands, each equally claiming to be in the national interest. First, there is the demand for the repair of military material. Even if, as I desire and hope, we arrive at international arrangements for the prevention of war, they will only secure confidence if they are backed by the strength and determination of the contracting Powers. . . . Second, there will be a demand for storage. How necessary this is the Central Powers have discovered by bitter experience. England, too, has lost her island security. So that not only must ordinary peace supplies be replenished, but supplies of the most important foodstuffs and raw materials must be stored and financed to serve for the needs of many years ahead. Then, thirdly, comes the natural demand of the civil population for the satisfaction of its daily needs. . . . All these things must be paid for in goods, gold, or credit. Exportable goods do not exist in sufficient quantities. Our stock of gold is not available for the purpose, and, as for credit, many of the countries which produce raw materials are not in a position to give it. . . . Nothing remains but to withdraw part of the imported raw materials from serving the needs of the civilian population, and to work them up for export purposes so as gradually to arrive at a commercial and financial equilibrium."

FIRE IN HUNTER-STREET.

While passing the premises of C. Price, till lately occupied by J. E. Chinnery, in Hunter-street, at 4 o'clock this morning, Constable Thorn noticed smoke issuing, and summoned the brigade. The firemen were on the scene in a few minutes. They found the dining-room on the ground floor full of smoke, but the fire had not obtained a sufficient hold to do any damage worth speaking about.

LATE WAR NEWS.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

GERMAN COMMENT.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

An Amsterdam report says President Wilson's message was mutilated or suppressed by many German newspapers. The Cologne "Volkszeitung" states:—In the interests of our readers we do not give a full report of that bloated individual whose message contains impertinent insinuations which do not possess the slightest value. It shows President Wilson posing as a world judge, to whose decisions every living creature is supposed to bow.

The entire German comment indicates that the Central Powers are suffering from swelled-head, which is the greater because of the prospect of a separate peace with Russia. The High Command is determined on one more appeal to the God of Battles, believing they will succeed, but in the event of failure conditions will not be much worse than now.

The Paris "Temps" refers to President Wilson's message as one of the greatest political events of the war. It holds out a promise of better days to nations now standing between a terrible past and an anguished future.

POSITION IN RUSSIA.

MORE HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

A despatch from Petrograd says an agreement has been reached between the Bolshevik and Ukrainian delegates at Brest Litovsk. The independence of the Ukraine was recognised, and the delegates decided to present a united front. The agreement ends the hopes of the Germans of dividing the Bolsheviks from South Russia, where the food and other commodities form the chief German peace objective.

M. Lenin has departed from Petrograd, either for a holiday in Finland or to confer with the Austrian and German Socialists in Stockholm. Before leaving he said: "I fear we will be compelled to stop demobilisation and prepare for war. We shall never agree to a shameful peace."

BRITAIN'S WAR AIMS.

CONTRASTED WITH GERMANY'S.

Mr. A. J. Balfour delivered a speech last evening on Britain's war aims.

"There has," Mr. Balfour said, "been no essential modification in the Allies' war aims. We regret that the attitude of Germany and her satellites is unchanged, except to the extent of expressing the hope that there will be some arrangement to avoid future wars. Although perhaps they were not whole-hearted, the declaration shows an improvement in their moral tone. We must remember that the Germans regarded war as the greatest instrument of progress. A whole school of statesmen still exists in Germany maintaining that it would be criminal folly to abandon Belgium. Admiral Von Tirpitz wants Calais and Boulogne. If the Germans evacuated Belgium to-morrow they would leave a derelict starving population, yet they are unwilling to repair their bitter wrongs, premeditated wounds, and wanton outrages. Any nation capable of a spark of generous feeling would hasten to assist innocents, but Germany has a different sense of honour. The world is now panting for peace. What is the obstacle? The aims of the contending parties are apparently irreconcilable. It is only necessary to examine the Allied aims to understand Germany's, namely, the prevention of Belgian independence, the prevention of the completion of Italian unity, the prevention of the adjustment of wrongs done to Alsace-Lorraine and Poland, and of the sufferings of Roumania, Servia, and Montenegro: the restoration of Mesopotamia, Arabia, and Jerusalem to the Turk, and the handing of Greece to her betrayers. These are the purposes for which Germany is sending youths to the slaughter. She is prepared to keep the world plunged in war. If the league of nations be successful in guarding international stability it must start with an arrangement in regard to territory based on equity and freedom. The German peace would leave Europe in a worse state, with every passion embittered by wrong triumphant."

WOOL DISTRIBUTION.

A distribution was held in London of Australian wool at prices fixed under the new schedule for civilian uses. There were 8944 bales catalogued, of which 5730 were from New South Wales and 1944 from Queensland. Though it was understood that they were intended for the woollen trade, many lots suitable for combing were included, but no licenses had been granted to topmakers or worsted spinners, consequently only 2000 were sold.

CROWN PRINCE'S BELIEF.

An Amsterdam message says that a committee representing German labourers who desire peace, telegraphed to the German Emperor, the Crown Prince, and Marshal Von Hindenburg requesting them to secure the future of German labourers by the peace that comes of victory. The Crown Prince replied: "There is no reason for uneasiness. The Empire's leaders will crown the heroic deeds of the army and navy by a good and honourable peace guaranteeing happy conditions of life for German labourers, and the free development of their labours on German soil."

GERMAN DYE SECRETS.

Mr. Rowe, the expert at the Manchester School of Technology, who tested the German aniline dyes in Switzerland, in an interview, said the recipes number about ninety. It was impossible to say how far they are already common knowledge or the extent they would have been manufactured in Britain if capital, plant, raw materials, and labour had been available.

VOTES FOR WOMEN.

Miss Christabel Pankhurst says that she is overjoyed by the fact that women's hopes are being realised after patient waiting and peaceful warfare. They were determined to use the vote for national defence, without which ultimate victory would be impossible. English women to-day had but one idea, namely, the victory of our arms.

MERCANTILE MARINE.

Mr. Archibald Hurd calls attention to the failure to maintain the strength of the mercantile marine. Intensive shipbuilding was neglected in 1915 and 1916, and the errors of this policy brought the food troubles. The new man-power proposals must first meet the requirements of the engine-shops and shipyards.

FINLAND'S INDEPENDENCE.

A Copenhagen message says that Denmark and Norway have acknowledged Finland's independence.

VICTORIA CROSS AWARDS.

Eighteen Victoria Crosses have been awarded, the recipients, including Private Henry James Nicholas, a New Zealander, for conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty in an attack. Nicholas belonged to a Lewis gun section, which was ordered to form a defensive flank to the right of an advance. The advance was subsequently checked by the enemy at a strong point, and Nicholas rushed forward alone and shot the officer in command of the strong point, overcame a garrison of sixteen by means of bombs and the bayonet, capturing four wounded prisoners and a machine-gun practically single-handed, and saving many casualties. Subsequently, when the advance reached the limit, Nicholas collected ammunition under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. His exceptional valour and coolness throughout the operations was an inspiring example to all.

Seven Canadians have received the Victoria Cross, including Lieutenant C. P. O'Kelly, whose company advanced a thousand yards without barrage and captured six pill-boxes, a hundred prisoners, and ten machine-guns. Sergeant Mullin, a Canadian, crawled to the top of a pill-box and shot two machine-gunners with his revolver. Though his clothes were riddled with bullets, he never faltered. Other Canadians rushed the machine-gun posts and killed or made prisoners of the gun crews.

Another of the recipients, Lieutenant Robert Gee, of the Royal Fusiliers, when the enemy pierced our line, captured the brigade headquarters ammunition dump. Gee was taken prisoner, but killed his guard with a spiked stick, escaped, and organised a party, who attacked the enemy fiercely and finally established a defensive flank on the outskirts of the village. When he found the enemy was using a machine-gun with deadly effect, he took a revolver in each hand, and, followed by one man, rushed the gun, killing eight of the crew. Though wounded, he refused to have his wound dressed until the defence was organised.

Lance-corporal McBeath, of the Seaforth Highlanders, with the assistance of a tank, rushed five machine-guns and drove the gunners into a deep dugout, where McBeath, regardless of danger, followed, capturing 33 prisoners and enabling two British units to advance.

HEAVY RAIN.

THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

WHEAT DISTRICTS AFFECTED.

Heavy rain has fallen in New South Wales, and with the exception of the trans-Darling districts, where it has been rather scattered, a general rainfall has been recorded.

The benefits of this storm will vary according to the districts and its products. To some it has been most welcome, but to wheat farmers it simply means yet another loss. The rain on the coastal area will result in a continuance of an already excellent season. On the tablelands the falls will be welcome, but on the other side of the mountains and throughout the wheat belt considerably more harm than good will be done. The rain comes in the midst of an already delayed harvest, and it will tend not only to hold up the harvesting operations, but will considerably depreciate the value of the standing crop. Operations generally will be made more difficult and certain damage done to the hay.

In the city and suburbs yesterday the intermittent rain of the previous day developed greater intensity, and assumed the proportions of an almost continuous rainfall throughout the day. The increased intensity of the rain became evident at about 9.30 a.m., when the falls in some of the suburbs averaged 100 points per hour. At Parramatta in two hours—9.35 a.m. to 11.35 a.m.—215 points were recorded. This average, however, became considerably less, and the intensity declined during the later portions of the day; but nevertheless the registration between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. yesterday at Parramatta was 511 points, an average of nearly 43 points per hour. In Sydney for the 12 hours ended at 9 p.m. the registration was 448 points.

RAIN IN QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Special advices at 10.30 a.m. state that the monsoonal disturbance has made definite progress since yesterday morning, and, according to latest reports, occupies a position on the weather chart between Boulia and Sandy Cape. A very pronounced decrease of pressure has occurred in the region between Rockhampton, Sandy Cape, Brisbane, Goondiwindi, and Mitchell. This connotes an increase of intensity of heavy and general rain in the Central highlands, Darling Downs, and South Coast divisions ere it passes out to sea. This it will doubtless do during the next 24 hours, and it is not unlikely that rather heavy weather will be caused along the coast south of Broad Sound. Heavy and general rain has fallen throughout Queensland, except in the Central-western and far South-western districts, notably the sub-tropical coast, among the largest falls being 258 points at Barcaldine, 417 at Emerald, 208 at Springsure, 266 at Rolleston, 371 at Bauhinia Downs, 340 at Taroom, 353 at Port Alma, 403 at Kabra, 420 at Howard, 358 at Bundaberg, 367 at Maryborough, 290 at Eidsvold, 275 at Woomby, and 230 at Warra.

STATION REPORTS.

Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co. have received the following telegrams reporting rain:—

From Warbreccan station, Stonehenge, Queensland, dated Jan. 8: "Rainfall, Warbreccan, Jan. 1, 171 points." From Warenda station, Boulia, Queensland, dated Jan. 7: "Rainfall, Jan. 5 and 6, Warenda 151 points, Boulia 72 points, still raining." Dated Jan. 8: "Rainfall, Jan. 7, Warenda 146 points, Boulia 1 inch. Weather still unsettled."

PENRITH.—The rainfall at Penrith from 9 o'clock on Thursday morning to 9 o'clock on Friday night was 375 points.

LITHGOW.—Steady, welcome rain has fallen during the last 24 hours, registering 142 points.

WOLLONGONG.—Very heavy rain fell here on Friday.

PORTLAND.—Steady soaking rain has fallen almost continuously during the past 24 hours, and 3 inches have been registered. It is still raining, with no sign of clearing.

ALSTONVILLE.—Very heavy rain fell on Thursday, and in the 24 hours up to 9 a.m. on Friday 345 points were recorded. For the month up to Friday 763 points fell, and it is still raining heavily.

COOMA.—The weather is dull. About half an inch of rain fell on Thursday night. This was much needed after the hot weather. There are good growths of grass and herbage everywhere.

SINGLETON.—Showery weather has been experienced since 7 o'clock on Thursday evening, and up to 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon 124 points were recorded. It is still raining.

NOWRA.—Very heavy rain fell on Thursday night, five inches being registered up to 9 a.m. next day.

BUNDARRA.—A heavy rainstorm passed over the town on Thursday night, 117 points being recorded. Landholders are complaining about the excessive rain. A month's fine weather would be welcome.

NATIONALISATION OF MINES

STRONG PROTEST FROM NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

At to-day's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, reference was made to the proposal to nationalise the coal mines of this State, and the following motion was carried unanimously:—

"That, in the opinion of the council of this chamber it would not be in the best interests of the people of the State, or of those engaged in the industry, for the Government to nationalise the coal mines of N.S.W., for the following reasons:—(1) That the industry is so large and complex that it could not possibly be satisfactorily administered by a Government department; (2) that the industry is one which calls essentially for individual effort and enterprise to ensure success; (3) that the public should not be committed to a financial experiment of such gigantic proportions, and which is open to grave doubts as to its success; (4) that if, as suggested, the object is to impose additional taxation, this method is regarded as being most improper, and a very dangerous innovation; (5) that any proposal to compel mine-owners or any section of the community to accept Government bonds in exchange for their assets would be void of all principles of justice."

During the discussion it was pointed out that the ill success met with in State ventures already entered upon, and the muddle into which the postal and telephone services had been brought, were strong evidence against the Government attempting to run the coal-mines.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

The executive of the Women's Liberal Federation has protested against the policy of Lord Rothermere (President of the Air Council) in regard to air reprisals upon German civilians, and will urge the Government not to sanction such policy.

Mr. Cuthbert Burgoyne has been exempted from military service upon a statement by Mr. Fisher (High Commissioner) that his work is of much importance to the Australian wine industry.

The Government is sending representatives of British trade unions to America, including Mr. W. A. Appleton (secretary of the General Federation of Trade Unions).

Mr. W. H. Page (American Ambassador in London) announces that America is sending a hundred thousand nurses to the fighting fronts in France, Belgium, Italy, Servia, and Palestine.

Captain von Muller, who commanded the Emden, was included in a batch of 195 repatriated German civilians, who departed from Boston (Lincolnshire).

A message from Amsterdam states that Berlin officially threatens to transfer 600 Frenchmen to Russia, and 400 women to Holzminden camp, as a reprisal for the French retention of the inhabitants of Alsace Lorraine contrary to the law of nations.

CENSURE MOTION.

IN FEDERAL PARLIAMENT.

MR. TUDOR'S SPEECH.

PRIME MINISTER IN DEFENCE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The debate on the no-confidence motion, notice of which was given yesterday by the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Tudor, was opened this morning in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Tudor moved:—"That this House protests against—

"(a) The repudiation of pledges by the Prime Minister and other Ministers.

"(b) The political persecution of public men and other citizens and of the Press under the War Precautions Regulations during the recent referendum campaign.

"(c) The deprivation of statutory electoral rights of Australian-born citizens by regulations behind the back of Parliament; and

"(d) The general administration of public affairs, and wishes to inform the Governor-General that the Government does not possess the confidence of the people of Australia."

He said if ever there was an occasion in which such a motion should be moved this was the occasion. The referendum had just been taken, and the Labour party had got 16,000 more votes than at the first referendum. This motion would clear the atmosphere. If there were any members on the Ministerial side of the House who thought the Government had done wrong in breaking the pledge which they had made they would have an opportunity of doing so on this motion, but if they voted for the Government they would back up the Ministers in breaking the pledge which they had made.

Mr. Boyd (Vic.): We like to choose our company.

Mr. Tudor: Quite right, but Ministerialists would not be able to get out of it by that subterfuge. It was well known that the decision of the Government to take a referendum was arrived at in a hurry. All arrangements had been made by the Ministry to take part in the opening of the east-west railway, but the Government suddenly decided to have a referendum, and the ceremony was abandoned. Everyone knew why. Sir William Irvine forced the hands of the Government over the referendum. He addressed meetings in various States, and by his action compelled the Government to take this course, or else he would have had them out of office. Sir William Irvine assured the Government that there was a large majority in favour of conscription, and the Government listened to the noise that was made by the Press, which was in favour of the referendum being taken. When the announcement was first made on November 8 about the intention of the Government to have a referendum nothing was said about the issue being made a vital one, but the Press immediately urged the Government to make it a vital issue, and the same course was supported by Sir William Irvine. On November 12 the Ministry decided that it should be a vital issue. Mr. Tudor read extracts from various speeches by the Prime Minister during the campaign, and said that an honourable man was bound by his words. A dishonourable man could not be bound by his words, even though they were engraven in steel. He said the pledge was given that unless the powers asked for were granted by the people the Government would resign. According to the Postmaster-General, the Government would not carry on for 24 hours. According to Senator Millen, the Government would get out of office. According to the Minister for Defence, if the people voted no they would put in a Labour Government. Did Ministers mean anything by these pledges, or were they just put up for platform purposes? In the words of Sir William Irvine, not only was the Government, but every supporter, bound by the pledge.

Sir William Irvine said that on every occasion that he made this statement he qualified it by saying they were bound by the pledge unless they disclaimed it.

Mr. Tudor: How many members did disclaim it. The Government had lost, and had now decided on a policy of hush and smother concerning the pledge, relying on the Press and the censorship to keep it dark. The Ministry had lost the respect of a great number of those who supported them at the last general election. They thought that they could fool the public by the transparent device of putting in their resignations, and then all going back again, but it would not deceive the public, because the definite pledges of Ministers were on record. He also referred to the conduct of the campaign.

A member: Don't forget to say that you were sent for.

Mr. Tudor said that as leader of the Opposition he was sent for to see if he could form a Government, and he said what he believed to be true—that there were many on the other side who were not satisfied with a reshuffle, which meant the old men going back, and would sooner have his (Mr. Tudor's) party in for a little while than be participators in the action that had been taken. How long would the people of Australia permit this calamitous mountebank to rule over them.

The Speaker: Order! I must ask the hon. member to withdraw that.

Mr. Tudor said he was simply quoting a remark made by a member of the Ministerial party.

The Speaker said it was not permissible to quote in the House expressions that were not Parliamentary.

Proceeding, Mr. Tudor said he was speaking politically, and not personally. He would not be a party to the attacks that were being made on the Prime Minister by men of his own party and outside. The attitude taken by some men was absolutely unfair.

Referring to the trial ballot of the returned soldiers, taken before referendum day Mr. Tudor said it was either a fake or the soldiers were compelled to vote "Yes." The men in hospital were told: "If you don't vote "Yes" we won't bring you any more comforts." (Ministerial dissent). He could get sworn declarations to that effect if a promise were given that the men would not be punished for it.

Mr. Gregory (W.A.): It is a dirty insinuation.

Mr. Tudor: It is not. Don't make any mistake about that.

Mr. Gregory: If you made that statement in Perth they would tar and feather you.

Mr. Tudor said he had been informed of his facts by soldiers. Returned men who had advocated the "No" side had been published.

Mr. Finlayson (Qld): One had his pension stopped.

Continuing, Mr. Tudor said the "Noes" had won in spite of the pledges which was now being dishonoured. The cheque they had given was dishonoured when it was presented for payment. The pledge was not made in the heat of a platform discussion. It was made by Ministers calmly and deliberately. The establishment of the Commonwealth police force was one of the worst actions of the Prime Minister during the campaign. There were disturbances, but these did not justify the creation of the force. He hoped the Ministry would review the matter. If Commonwealth police were necessary in Queensland they were also necessary in the other States. He also complained of the use of the censorship during the referendum, and of the prosecutions under the War Precautions Regulations, which, he said, were all against one side. In conclusion he said:—"The pledge has been broken. What does the Government propose to do?"

MR. HUGHES IN REPLY.

Mr. Hughes, on rising, was greeted with Ministerial cheers. He said he wished that he were able to offer the formal congratulations to the leader of the Opposition which were quite common under such circumstances, but he felt himself quite unable to do so. He could imagine that had a turn of the wheel of destiny placed him where Mr. Tudor was to-day, and had he succeeded no better than Mr. Tudor had done, he would have indeed considered himself gibbeted for ever by public opinion, and have lost all claim to be regarded as a leader of men in this country. He would ask the House to review with him the whole situation, and not that petty and comparatively insignificant part of the tremendous and tragic spectacle which now confronted them that Mr. Tudor had dealt with. Mr. Tudor had made no reference to the fact of this great war. (Ministerial cheers.) One would think that by some hocus pocus they had abolished the war and its consequences, whereas they were standing on the very brink of a precipice over which to-morrow they might topple. There was something in the result of the referendum and the situation with which they were now faced that was tragic beyond the power of words to express. The referendum meant government of the people for the people, and directly by the people—the principle to which they of the Labour party had pinned their faith—but when it was called upon to justify itself it failed. Mr. Tudor had said nothing about the consequences of this vote to Australia, to civilisation, and to the cause of peace. Mr. Tudor had said not one word of the fact that Germany intended, if by any means in her power she could accomplish it, to Prussianise the world, and retain, if she could, the territory she occupied and dismember the British Empire. What was the position in Australia? Who could say that democracy had emerged from its trial triumphantly. Mr. Tudor had not even done what he might legitimately have done, and acclaimed the fact that Australia had escaped conscription. He (Mr. Hughes) appealed to the House to consider the situation, and what it meant to Australia. There were now 41 German legions detached from the Eastern frontier concentrated at Cambrai. What would happen if the Germans broke through there? Could any man say that they had the right to ignore such a situation which might involve them all in common destruction. It might have been expected that Mr. Tudor would put forward some solution to this tremendous problem, but not by one word or one syllable had he shown the House that he recognised its seriousness. Mr. Tudor had not uttered a word of commendation on those magnificent declarations of Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson.

Mr. Brennan (Victoria): Get on with your defence if you have one.

Mr. Hughes, proceeding, declared that much had been said about pledges. He would remind the House that he was one of those men who in 1914 subscribed to the manifesto upon which the Labour party was elected, and which declared their determination to wage this war for those great principles which Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson had reiterated to the world. This pledge was made by his honourable friends, and they did not keep it. They now talked about keeping pledges, yet every one of those men was elected on the pledge that they would stand behind the Empire to the last man and the last shilling and subordinate everything to that. They had failed to rouse the democracy of this country to a sense of its duty, but it was not the Government who had failed, but the people of Australia. The Government had failed to make disloyal men loyal. They had failed to make selfish men forget their selfishness. There were tens of thousands of men who voted for the sake of their pocket. He would infinitely rather stand with a man who said he was a Sinn Feiner than he would stand with those men who sold this country to put money in their pockets. (Opposition hear, hear.) He could quite understand a man giving a vote to save his life. He could not applaud it. He could understand a man attached to an organisation following that organisation out of a sense of loyalty, but he could never forget or forgive those men who grew fat on this war, pretending that they desired that Australians should do their duty, and who went into the ballot box and voted no.

Mr. Mahoney (N.S.W.): You protect them by legislation.

Mr. Hughes: Time would write its verdict on the vote of December 20, and the people who gave the verdict would be condemned. Mr. Tudor had stated the referendum had been forced by Sir William Irvine. If anyone could say in caucus or on the floor of the House, or anywhere else, that he (Mr. Hughes) could be driven by any other man, then he would say no more. He would now turn to the pledge or statement he made at Bendigo. The statement he had made at Bendigo had been described as a pledge—he called it a threat (Opposition laughter)—but if they preferred the term he would describe it as a pledge. He was elected to Parliament in May upon pledges which he had made at Bendigo on behalf of the Nationalist party, and practically every Ministerial member was elected on those pledges, and those pledges had all been honoured. (Ministerial cheers.) No one would say that the defeat of the referendum in itself was a reason for the Nationalist party to go. (Opposition hear, hears.) What did his pledge at Bendigo in November mean if it were not an idle phrase? It meant simply that the choice was between the Nationalist party with conscription and the Tudor party without conscription. (Opposition hear hears). Never before had a Ministry gone out of office because of a defeat of a referendum after it had been put to the people. The Labour party had put referenda and lost them, but there had never been a suggestion from members of the Opposition that they should resign. Mr. Ryan, in Queensland, had been defeated on his referendum for the abolition of the Upper House, but it had never been suggested that he should vacate office on that account. The reason, then, that the Opposition was calling for the Nationalist party to go out was the deliberate statement he had made at Bendigo. (Opposition hear, hears). In consequence of that pledge he had tendered the resignation of the Ministry and of himself to the Governor-General unconditionally and without offering any advice to his Excellency. His Excellency had sent for Mr. Tudor. If the Governor-General had thought fit he could have commissioned Mr. Tudor to form a Ministry, and then it would have been for the House to determine whether such a Ministry possessed the confidence of the House. He did not know whether Mr. Tudor would have accepted such a commission.

Mr. West (N.S.W.): He did not get the chance.

Mr. Hughes said that if Mr. Tudor had been given the chance and had formed a Ministry it was not likely that it would have lasted very long. The Governor-General had exhausted all the sources of information, and then came back and asked him (Mr. Hughes) to form a Ministry. The pledge meant that Mr. Tudor's party or the Nationalist party should govern, but there was no way by which the official Labour party could conduct the business of the House with only 22 supporters, as against 53 Nationalists. By its resignation the Ministry had done everything that could be done to give effect to its pledge. (Opposition dissent and interruption). It was not possible for the Tudor party to carry on the government, and so the Nationalist party had agreed to do so. That was the view of the Nationalist party, and he ventured to say that it was the view of 99 people out of every 100. (Opposition dissent.) Could any man honestly say that another appeal to the people, with all its turmoil and confusion, would be in the best interests of the country? He could not agree that it would. (Derisive Opposition laughter.) Since his return from England in August, 1916, there had been two referenda and an election, and it was now up to them to see if it were possible for the men representing the people of Australia in Parliament to come together and try to do some work on behalf of the Empire. When the Nationalist party was formed Mr. Tudor was asked to join and form a truly National party, which would include representatives of all sections of the House. Mr. Tudor declined to do so. If even now Mr. Tudor would say that he was prepared to work with the Nationalist party he was prepared to help him to do so, and if he (Mr. Hughes) were in the way, and in his absence Mr. Tudor would join forces with the Nationalists, he (Mr. Hughes) would stand down.

Mr. Rodgers (V.): What is the answer?

Mr. Tudor did not reply.

Mr. Hughes: Could not some modus vivendi be found by which they could do the work they had been sent there to do. Let the anti-conscriptionists show their loyalty and their desire to put Australia first by defining in a clean and unambiguous way what they were prepared to do. He would not indulge in personalities, but would confine himself to principles and causes. In regard to the second paragraph of Mr. Tudor's motion, Mr. Tudor had endeavoured to persuade the House and the country that the Ministry had used its wide powers to stifle freedom of speech. (Opposition cheers.) There was no country in the world where a man could say what he wanted as freely as he could in Australia. During the campaign if some of the things that had been said on the "No" side had been said in France or in Italy the speakers would have been in prison long ago. Every adult in Australia and all soldiers in the trenches had been allowed to have their say. Unfortunately, they had failed, but that was not due to the Ministry. It was a complete condemnation of the referendum as an instrument of democracy. In the north, in Queensland, there was a reign of terror, and the "Yes" side had never been allowed to express itself. There were other ways of interfering with freedom of speech besides the censorship. At Darlinghurst he had been howled down by a mob of men which, he ventured to say, would supply two months' recruiting quotas, and yet the Opposition talked about the freedom of speech. During the recent campaign the anti-conscriptionists had had more money behind them than the conscriptionists. (Opposition laughter.) They had had more posters than the conscriptionists. They had had money enough to pay for half-page display advertisements in the big daily papers. They had had more canvassers, and yet they came to that House and talked about interference with the freedom of speech. In many places there had been a boycott against conscriptionists. He himself had seen a soldier kicked in Collins-street because he was wearing a "Yes" button. In many parts of the country there was such a reign of terror that no person dare admit himself to be a conscriptionist. These people would down Australia now if they could.

Australia, Mr. Hughes went on to say, had failed, but what they had to do now was to make the best of things as they were, and that was what he asked the House to do. Let them get voluntary recruits somehow. If the Opposition could get 7000 men a month their place was on this side of the House, but what was the position of the Official Labour party? The Trades and Labour Council of New South Wales recently unanimously agreed to a motion endorsing the preamble of the peace proposals, adopted by the last Political Labour League Conference, and demanding that the Allied Governments immediately initiate negotiations for peace. Were they to trust men like those with the government of the country? They said that they could get recruits, yet it was notorious that they had not done so. He did not say that there were no exceptions, but taking the movement as a whole they had not helped the Government to get recruits, but had thrown themselves against it. Could it be said that because conscription had failed they should be governed by men who would immediately initiate negotiations for peace. There was only one way whereby they could get peace, and safety, and that was to break the power of the Hohenzollerns. The war was not against the German people, but against the accursed power of militarism that had enmeshed them. Let them see in Germany what they now saw in Russia. Until there was government by the people in Germany there could be no guarantee for the world. Mr. Tudor had spoken about the disfranchisement of the Germans. A straw showed the way the stream was going. Why this anxiety on behalf of the Germans? Before the war the districts where the German vote predominated never went with the Labour party, but since the war began it had gone with the Labour party almost unanimously.

Mr. Archibald (S.A.) interjected that this showed that they must be a German party.

Several members of the Opposition interjected.

Finally the Speaker named Mr. Matthews (Vic.), and asked the Prime Minister to take action.

Mr. Matthews said that he objected to being called a German.

Mr. Hughes appealed to him to apologise to the Speaker, but he left the Chamber.

A motion for his suspension for the remainder of the sitting was agreed to by 42 to 18.

Mr. Archibald then apologised for his interjection.

The Prime Minister, continuing, said that the Germans in this country had done their work cunningly and only too well, and the Government had to deal with the situation as they found it. While penalising many loyal Germans, they thought it only proper that the referendum should be decided by persons of British descent. He appealed to the members of the Opposition to help the Government during this war to solve those complex problems that confronted them. He again said that if the Opposition desired completely to collaborate with the Government, and it would say so, he would go half way to meet them. In conclusion, Mr. Hughes said that the Government was here constitutionally, and they intended to carry out the policy on which they were elected.

The debate was adjourned till Tuesday.

On the motion for the adjournment, the House was counted out at 4.45 p.m.

In the Senate the Supply Bill for one month was passed through all stages without discussion.

The House adjourned until Thursday next.

THE LABOUR PARTY.

ACTION IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The report of the executive of the Council of the South Australia branch of the Australian Labour party, which was presented to and adopted by a meeting of that body on Thursday evening, stated that the greatest fight for freedom through the ballot box in history here had ended in a victory for democracy against the forces of tyranny and slavery. After such an emphatic decision from the electors it was not unnatural that the Ministerialists should have become alarmed and have sought a way out of the difficulty in which they had been placed by the Prime Minister's Bendigo pledge. The action of the Federal Ministry in walking out and walking in was the greatest betrayal which had taken place in the political history of Australia, and it had been well said that Mr. Hughes and his Ministry would be everlastingly dishonoured and debased. However, it would be well for the Labour party to be prepared for eventualities, although it could not be expected that their opponents would do anything that would jeopardise their seats.

In accepting the report the meeting carried the following motion:—"That the South Australian branch of the A.L.P. repudiates Mr. Hughes as Prime Minister of Australia, and demands that the Nationalist party shall honour the pledge repeatedly made that the Hughes Government would not attempt to carry on as a Government in the event of the conscription referendum being defeated. In order that effective steps shall be taken to rouse the people of Australia to compel the Hughes Government to resign, the executives be instructed to communicate with all the interstate branches, and to ask them to co-operate in holding indignation meetings throughout the Commonwealth, so that common honesty and decency may be restored in the administration of the Commonwealth Government."

MR. HOLMAN'S COMMENT.

"I have long known that Mr. Hughes is a man whose pledged word is absolutely worthless," said the Premier (Mr. Holman) yesterday, "but I confess I am amazed and depressed to find that the whole of his colleagues have joined him in this exploit. I can only attribute it in certain cases as due to a sense of mistaken loyalty to a man who has never been loyal to anybody or anything."

"POLITICAL DEGRADATION."

PERTH (W.A.), Friday.

At the biennial meeting of the Western Australian branch of the A.W.U. a resolution was passed deploring the depths of political degradation to which the Hughes Government had descended in again taking office, and thus attempting to delude the public that the Bendigo pledge had been honourably fulfilled.

THE ROCKS AREAS.

MINISTER OUTSPOKEN.

Mr. J. C. L. Fitzpatrick, Assistant Treasurer and Minister for Mines, yesterday afternoon received a large deputation, introduced by Mr. M. Bourke, M.L.A., and including Messrs. J. Wright, Brookfield, Smith, and Dr. Arthur, M.L.A., concerning the notices served on the tenants of the houses at Miller's Point controlled by the Harbour Trust.

Ald. O'Connor, secretary of the Coal Lumpers' Union, said the notices had been served on people to quit the houses by Saturday, although they were prepared to do their best to pay the arrears of rent. All they wanted was a reasonable thing.

The Minister: "Are you prepared to accept a reasonable offer and end the whole matter." The Harbour Trust Commissioners and the Housing Board, he said, were prepared to accept from any person who had received notice a proposition to meet the obligations. He was not there to discuss anything in connection with the recent strike. The notices were issued to those who had not paid. They had the opportunity now to approach the authorities, and they would find neither the Harbour Trust Commissioners nor the Housing Board severe; on the contrary, they would be prepared to meet the tenants. He had pointed out to a previous deputation that, in consequence of the strike, a new body of men had been brought into existence, and the Government was pledged to stand by those men. It was immaterial to the Government where the displaced men got work; if they could not get work that would be a matter to be taken into consideration. The Harbour Trust was entrusted with a big State asset and could not be a benevolent institution.

Replying to further representations, Mr. Fitzpatrick said he was pleased to have the opportunity of learning what was the case the deputation had prepared. In a nutshell, all the Harbour Trust and Housing Board had done was to notify the tenants that they must do something towards meeting their obligations, or do something else. Some severe criticism had been levelled at the Government in consequence of that, especially at a celebrated gathering in the locality. At the meeting much was said about the Trades Hall and Lord Mayor's funds, but nothing was said about the £30,000 the Government had spent in mitigation of the distress that had been brought on families by men who were lured into a certain course of action. The Government did not desire credit for that, but it considered that its assistance should be included in that given by others. The course taken in regard to the tenements was reasonable in the circumstances—it was that those in arrears should make some arrangements. The lowest amount in arrears in respect of which notice had been issued was £8/7/6, and the highest was £36—and the latter, at 13/ per week, was proof that the authorities were not severe. In a number of cases satisfactory arrangements had been made within five days; in all others similar action was possible.

"The Harbour Trust and the Housing Board," continued Mr. Fitzpatrick, "have been most reasonable. All this talk that has been indulged in I regard as so much playing to the political side, and many of the statements have been made for purely political purposes."

WHEAT CROPS.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The question of the responsibility of guaranteeing 4s per bushel f.o.b. respecting the 1917-18 and 1918-19 wheat crops was considered by the Australian Wheat Board recently, and it was decided to ask the various State Governments to agree to an allocation of the responsibility for the guarantee respecting advances made to farmers. The South Australian Government has intimated to the board that it is prepared to accept its share of responsibility. The States will be held liable for 3s per bushel, and in each State the responsibility for the difference between 3s and 4s f.o.b. on an f.a.q. basis will be borne equally by the States and the Commonwealth Governments.

NEWCASTLE'S TRADE.

The revenue for 1917 amounted to £169,734, as against £260,348, representing a decline of over £100,000.

In 1917 a total number of 1184 vessels entered the port with a tonnage of 1,969,827, compared with 1403 with a tonnage of 2,553,777 in 1916.

THE MARKETS.

The heavy rain which fell incessantly yesterday had a most depressing influence upon city business, but orders from the country were again heavy, and the despatch departments were kept fully occupied throughout the day. Groceries were again in request. Tinned fish was regarded as good property, and very high rates were asked for salmon and sardines. Stocks of sheep's tongues were still short, and 23/ appeared to be the general quotation.

The inquiry for cornsacks showed a considerable falling-off, but one broker secured 75 bales at 10/ for despatch to the country. Holders of branbags were distinctly firmer than on the previous day, and it was difficult to place an order under 9/3. For wool packs 5/ was generally wanted.

Hardware and paints moved out steadily at previous levels.

MINING.

MAMMOTHS ACTIVE.

Opening operations in mining shares were much quieter on the Stock Exchange yesterday, but nevertheless the total turnover was by no means restricted. Copper stocks were handled quietly. Mount Morgans were unchanged at 32/, while Cuthberts moved up to 12/1½. Westonias received a little attention, and Deeps and Consols closed on a firmer basis.

The feature of the day's business was the continued activity in Mammoth Molybdenite. The paid issue opened firm, and advanced /4 to 18/7½ before midday, but reacted later to 18/. Despite the enhanced price of the paid issue, buyers held off the contributing shares, and sellers, who have been on the market for some days, succeeded in finding buyers at 1/ less than the paid-up amount of 7/6.

Barriers moved quietly in an easier market. "Hills" improved /3 to 58/3, but British were /3 down at 36/9, and Junction North fell /6 to 21/3. Norths and Junctions also declined. Firm prices ruled in the tin collection. Vegetable Creek moved up to 3/6, and Austral Malays were bought at 50/.

NOTES.

The secretary of the Asam Kumbang Tin Dredging, Ltd., reports that after great delay and difficult negotiating, all the material necessary for the construction of the company's dredge has either actually been secured or is in transit to the manufacturers' works. It is therefore reasonable to expect that the dredge will be ready for shipment from Australia by about August, 1918, and that production will commence early in 1919.

The Great Britain Sluicing Company reports that its Britain plant was removed to fresh site, and sluicing resumed a couple of days before the Christmas holidays commenced, and work was recommenced on January 3. At the Creek a paddock had been partly taken out prior to the holiday, and as the overburden carried a little tin the boxes were run down before the suspension of work for an estimated yield of 3 tons. On resuming after the holidays the sluicing of overburden from an extension of the paddock was commenced.

THE TURF.

Horse racing at Canterbury Park, and pony and galloway racing at Rosebery, furnish ample sport for metropolitan racegoers this afternoon; while those who prefer to go further afield are catered for at Wallsend. Victorian sporting folk assemble at Epsom; and a meeting will be held in Western Australia at Belmont Park. The summer reunion of the Burrell Jockey Club will be brought to a close.

Rosebery will this afternoon be the rendezvous of followers of pony and galloway racing, and, owing to the number of events that will be run in division, eleven races will be run. The customary transit service will be in vogue, and the first race is timed to start at 1 p.m. The results of the racing may be anticipated as under:—Maiden Handicap: First division, The Map, Soultette, Parade Lad; second division, Pitlochrie, Lord Fisherman, Lady Linnet; third division, Sir Clive, Smart Chaser, Clondesley. AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

During the 24 hours ended at 9 a.m. Friday, the big rain disturbance intensified in Queensland, and its influence overspread New South Wales and parts of Victoria and Tasmania. As a consequence, light to heavy rainfall, with many thunderstorms, occurred over a considerable area of Eastern Australia. In New South Wales the precipitation was general and numerous places had amounts exceeding an inch, the heaviest fall being 430 points at Nowra. Since 9 a.m. on Thursday the disturbance in the tropics has made about 600 miles easting, so that the pressure in the SE quarter of Queensland is now about two-tenths of an inch lower. There is also a slight fall in barometers in the NE quarter of New South Wales. Considering the steady increase in pressure over Tasmania and Victoria, indications favour an intensification in the wet weather conditions generally in this State. More heavy falls are probable, and winds should blow fresh and strong, with squalls on the coast, with moderate to rough seas. There is also evidence of a tropical disturbance off the North Coast, and the south coast of Queensland, which may soon co-operate with the centre of the high-pressure energy, which is over Tasmania, and thus assist in rough north-eastern conditions.

Ocean Forecast.—Strong to gales between Gabo and Rockhampton; elsewhere smooth to moderate.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening "The Bing Boys" will continue their merry career at Her Majesty's Theatre, where the production of this dazzling revue has led to packed audiences and almost unprecedented booking receipts. In addition to the successes of Jack Cannot, Leslie Holland, Minnie Love, Clyde Cooke, Maie Baird, and Nellie Payne, the smart drilling of the chorus, and the constant changes of costly costumes contribute to the popularity of the piece.

PALACE.—"TURN TO THE RIGHT."

That gracious looking matron, Mrs. Bascom (Miss Margaret Calvert), will look after her dear boys tonight at the Palace Theatre, where "Turn to the Right" will bring back "Muggs" and "Gilly," most entertaining rogues, presented by John Junior and Stapleton Kent. Walter P. Richardson will renew his welcome as simple "Joe Bascom," while Vincent Dennis returns to the fold as "Sammy Martin." Misses Lillian Tucker and Alma Rock-Phillips are the only newcomers to the cast, which, in addition will include Misses Lizette Parkes, and Marie Collier, Messrs. Carleton Stuart and George Chalmers, while Mr. Gaston Mervale, in addition to playing "Lester Morgan," will be responsible for the production. The plans are at Nicholson's and The White Rose.

CRITERION THEATRE.

On Wednesday and Friday next the final matinees of "Peter Pan" will be given, and on Friday night playgoers will enjoy the last opportunity of seeing J. M. Barrie's now famous fairy play, so advantageously presented at the Criterion Theatre.

"The Outcast" will be revived (for six nights) next Saturday, with Kathlene Macdonell and Charles Waldron in the central characters of Miriam, the outcast, and Geoffrey Sherwood, the wealthy young man who provides her with a temporary home. This emotional comedy-drama by Hubert Henry Davies caused much discussion last May. The following Saturday "The Willow Tree" will be produced, as noted in our Music and Drama column.

OPERA HOUSE—ROBINSON CRUSOE.

This afternoon (2.15) and evening, the Ben and John Fuller management will repeat their successful pantomime, "Robinson Crusoe of Rainbow Island," with Victor Prince in the name-part, whose scheme as author admits of ballets on the ocean bed, marches, and transformations. Nellie Kolle as principal boy heads a cast which keeps merrily moving the fun of the piece, and some of the latest specialties and novel effects justify the double performances.

ROYAL.—"THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT."

The last week of the juvenile pantomime, "The House that Jack Built," is now notified at the Theatre Royal, where the original Easter extravaganza of the J. C. Williamson Company is cleverly reproduced with the Tulip Ballet, the Ballet of the Seasons, the Ballet of the Emotions, and the popular comic scenes of the pantomime "book," are shown from a fresh standpoint by the well-trained little people at the Theatre Royal.

HIPPODROME.—"JACK AND BEANSTALK."

Both at two o'clock and 8 p.m. Mr. William Anderson's company will give performances to-day of "Jack and the Beanstalk," in regard to which special prices for children are notified. Mabelle Morgan heads the combination as principal boy, whilst on the comic side Harry Farrow as the dame and George Welch and Billy Rego as humorous assistants in the fun-making, are supplemented by ballets, marches, and constant changes of scene.

TIVOLI THEATRE.—ADA REEVE.

Although there is no abatement in the popularity of Miss Ada Reeve, the management of the Tivoli Theatre announces that the popular star will only appear in Winnie Brooke Widow until next Friday night. Miss Reeve has scored a bright success and it will be many a long day before she will be seen here again, so that crowded houses are expected during her last nights. Farewell matinees will be given to-day (2.30) and next Wednesday.

"BABY MINE," AT THE TIVOLI.

Next Saturday afternoon the management of the Tivoli Theatre will present the three-act comedy "Baby Mine" in addition to a series of vaudeville acts. This is made possible by saving time between the intervals of the smart comedy, which it will be remembered, was presented at the Criterion Theatre some time ago by J. C. Williamson, Ltd. The cast will be much the same as the original one, including as it does Beatrice Holloway, Robert Greig, Herbert Leigh, Marie Eaton, and Hugh Huntley. In the vaudeville section Eileen Boyd is announced to make her appearance after an absence of eight years.

TOWN HALL ORGAN RECITAL.

The city organist will give a recital of operatic and romantic music at the Town Hall to-night, when he will open with the overture to "Maritana," and present selections from "Rip Van Winkle," "Faust," "Rigoletto," and "Mignon" (Romance, Gavotte, and Polacca). Mr. Ernest Truman will play his own "Grand Pedal Solo," consisting of variations on a popular melody. The programme will include pieces by Lemare, Lemmens, and Thomas.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY.

This evening (8 o'clock) the Caledonian Society of Sydney will give their monthly concert at St. James's Hall, when Mr. W. Lorimer will direct the music with Miss F. Macfadyen as accompanist. Misses Elsie Peerless, Vera Macdonald, Messrs. Harry Campbell, G. Martinelli, E. A. Wright, Piper L. Mackenzie and the pupils of Mr. A. S. Bellamy will assist.

MLLE. ANTONIA DOLORES.

Mlle. Antonia Dolores, who since the war has confined her reappearances to generous Red Cross efforts, principally in Melbourne, now proposes a tour of her own, news which will be received with much satisfaction by concert-goers all over Australia. The popular French soprano will give two song recitals at Hobart next Wednesday and Thursday, followed by two at Launceston on January 21 and 22. Mr. Brownlow, her Sydney agent, adds that Miss Iris de Cairos Rego is now on her way to join the diva as pianist.

COOGEE CARNIVAL.

The carnival which has been held at Coogee partly in aid of the St. John Ambulance, Randwick division, will definitely close at 11 o'clock to-night. A final gold rush has been arranged for 4.30 this afternoon, and in the evening a come-as-you-please fancy dress fete will be held, cash prizes being offered for the best and most humorous costumes, worn by young and old. The final free fireworks display will announce that the carnival is over.

LADIES.—OUR TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY.
JUST 20 YEARS AGO we sailed from L'pool, Eng., per White Star Line to NEW YORK to endeavour to purchase with the ALMIGHTY DOLLAR processes of SWEET MANUFACTURE to resell in England.
OUR VISIT WAS A HUGE SUCCESS.
SUCCESS HAS DOGGED US EVER SINCE.
THEN it took 10 DAYS to do the trip. TO-DAY the Atlantic ocean greyhounds do it in 4½ DAYS.
AS THE WHITE STAR LINE HAVE MOVED WITH THE TIMES, so have we. THEN it took us a week to show the full complement of Candy lines. To-day we do it with greater success in HALF A DAY.
FREE?
YES, TOTALLY FREE.
In order TO PROVE OUR STATEMENT, DO YOU NOT SEE that WE ARE THE Firm to teach you the profitable HOME INDUSTRY OF CHOCOLATE-MAKING? Because we HAVE MADE OUR MONEY already out of our recipes by selling them to Confectionery Works in various countries, our price for them to you is made very insignificant. THOSE VERY RECIPES have been reduced by us from about 150lb boilings to suit your home requirements, and are NOW
THE KING PIN OF ACTUAL FACTORIES—NOT COOKERY BOOK ENIGMAS—
which anybody with A FEW SHILLINGS' CAPITAL CAN COMMENCE TEACHING.
OUR RECIPES ARE THE BEST KNOWN.
SO WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?
A WORD ABOUT SELLING.
SWEETS ALWAYS DID, ALWAYS WILL, SELL ANYWHERE.
AMERICA TOPS the world for sweet eating. AUSTRALIA, WELL UP, SECOND; but Australia has not the CHEWING FEVER like the States. Here's an incident. We were seated in a tram coach in Market-street, 'Frisco, when a lady and her daughter (about 17 years old) got in. Both had gum in their mouths. It's the fashion, and fashion, you know, DOES STRETCH. The little lass was chewing with an evident desire to keep pace with the tram, when her mother nudged her and said, "Mary, don't you see that gentleman looking at you? STOP STRETCHING your gum out like a string. CHEW IT LIKE A LADY." So she adroitly transposed her own piece from one side of her pretty mouth to the other. NO, Australia has not arrived at this stage, but AUSTRALIA WILL HAVE CHOCOLATES.
And all it needs is MAKERS.
WILL YOU MAKE CHOCOLATES, MADAM, AND MAKE MONEY?
Come and see what pupils have made after HALF A DAY WITH US; or if too far send name and add. only for particulars. POST INSTRUCTION INCLUDING NECESSARIES and MATERIALS, FREE. CARRIAGE PAID.

AS THIS PAPER GOES TO PRESS
news from England states that after TWO YEARS of persistent effort, a group of British Textile Workers, headed by the ENGLISH GOVERNMENT, have obtained
22 CLOSELY GUARDED SECRET RECIPES of GERMAN DYES from the German Dye Headquarters, AT LAST breaking down the GERMAN MONOPOLY. TWO YEARS IS RIDICULOUS TO OUR OWN KNOWLEDGE these recipes for TWENTY YEARS have been the subject of all the manoeuvres brains could devise to obtain their possession, WITHOUT AVAIL until now. How many years before this we can't say.
WE ASK YOU TO READ ABOUT THIS TO-DAY from abler pens than ours, more especially those VERY SCEPTICAL CALLERS who have LAUGHED OUTRIGHT when we have related how in fourteen years we have paid FOUR VISITS TO CHICAGO for ONE CAKE ICING RECIPE before we obtained it for ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and even then were bound down by HEAVY FORFEIT not to disclose or demonstrate it IN THE STATES. The reading will enlighten many of you as to the VALUE OF RECIPES. We're often told you...
THERE ARE RECIPES AND RECIPES and, perhaps, you will no longer wonder why we protect ours by COPYRIGHT NO. 200,795. IN OUR LITTLE WAY we have expended some £14,000 IN SWEET RECIPES, and to-day should not consider 1000 Guineas too much to give for the real Turkish Delight formula. If you go to THAT country for THAT Recipe, and many others we have already obtained.
YOUR LIFE IS IN YOUR HANDS.
Most of OUR RECIPES FOR CONFECTIONERY were closely guarded secrets, obtainable by diplomacy only. CALL AND SEE THE RESULT OF THESE RECIPES.
